City 'Slave Trade' Ring Broken

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Immigration officials in Victoria have broken up a covert ring that aimed at bringing East Indians into Canada illegally and then indenturing them to agents here in what one official has described as "a form of slave trade."

Doug Cook, officer-in-charge of the Victoria immigration office, told the Times Tuesday, his department monitored arrivals at Victoria International airport from Dec. 20 to Jan. 20 after learning of the operation.

During that time 25 people, mostly young married men, all from the Punjab, were identified as participants in the international immigrant smuggling scheme.

Twelve of their number have since been deported, Cook said. Some cases are pending, while others — who have blood relatives living in Canada — have been permitted to remain for a three-month visit but only after posting cash bonds of between $300 and $1,500 guaranteeing their departure.

Cook said the 25 arrived in Victoria at various times throughout the month by plane from Seattle — the final leg of a flight which originated in New Delhi and stopped over in London, England and Seattle.

When they landed they said they were en route to visit relatives in Toronto.

However, immigration officials believed that was just a ruse to gain entry into the country. (Through Commonwealth ties no visa is required for an Indian visiting Canada but the visitor must have a return ticket out of the country and limit his stay to three months.)

Cook said the object was work, generally available in west coast or interior B.C. sawmills.

He said a travel agency in Vancouver operated by an Indian whom he declined to name, is believed responsible for setting up the scheme, but no charges have been laid.

The agent, said Cook, charged each of the illegal immigrants a fee which ranged upwards from three times the cost of the $1,200 return air fare.

"A figure of $10,000 is an often bruited sum, but frankly we don't know for sure," he said.

Officials feel the persons would have been indentured for life . . . unless they were able to scrape together enough money to buy a passage back home.

"It is a form of slave trade operating right under our noses," Cook said. "It is nothing new to Canada . . . it's been done by the Chinese, the Portuguese, the Greek and Italians, too."

Cook said the Indian organizers had used Victoria as a "test area" and must have known of the staff limitations at the airport where normally only one immigration officer is on duty each shift.

He said the arrivals were purposefully set to coincide with the influx of travellers over the busy holiday period with the expectation the immigration screening would not be so punctilious.

Those engaged in the scheme were "victims of the system" possessed by the bright hope of vast wealth by Indian standards, Cook suggested.

A typical case, said Cook, was that of a young man in his mid-20's who left behind a wife and three children on the family farm in the Punjab. He told the immigration official he had come here for a visit because he had "heard about the beauties of Canada" and wanted to see them for himself.

Suspicions were aroused when it was calculated the man's air fare was equivalent to his total earnings over the past 10 years.

Cook said many of the Indians claimed they were going to visit a brother in Toronto.

"When we checked the information we discovered the brother they were talking about was a village or cousin "brother," and not any kind of brother we had ever known of."

Cook said the illicit scheme is still under investigation but that this much is known or believed to have happened:

—That an agent left from Canada and arrived in Dehli where he placed an advertizement in the local papers asking innocently "Are you interested in visiting Canada? I will help you get there."

—That the candidates were referred to an Indian travel agency. Immigration officials have traced 15 reservations to the same agency in old Delhi.

—That tickets for Pan American flights out of Delhi were arranged for the candidates.

—and that, because money cannot be take out of India legally, cash deposits were set up for the participants to pick up in either London or Seattle.

Cook said the cost to each individual varied "with whatever the market would stand."

He said though the candidate was ostensibly issued a return air ticket in compliance with Canadian visitor requirements there was some suspicion among officials here

'UFOs' JAYCEE TARGET

Unsightly Flag Offenders beware — the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce is after you.

The Jaycees have initiated a new project intended to track down all businesses whose Canadian or B.C. flag is in a tattered or torn condition.

If a Jaycee spots an unsightly flag offender (UFO), a letter will be sent asking the flag be replaced to give visiting tourists a better image of the city.

A flag may be considered unsightly, according to the Jaycees, if it is (1) tattered (2) torn (3) faded (4) not flown in centre of group, or (5) other.

CIA 'Active In Alta.'

CALGARY (CP) — Bruce McGuinness, a Vancouver television producer, said Tuesday the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) is active in Alberta "gathering information about, and perhaps trying to influence, the petroleum industry."

McGuinness, an independent producer, told radio station CFAC three persons were recruited in Alberta for CIA work by Virginio Gonzalez and "a Mr. Abbott." McGuinness formerly worked for the Calgary station.

McGuinness said earlier he was asked by Gonzalez and Abbott to watch the activities in Canada of John Meier, a former aide to recluse billionaire Howard Hughes, but he declined. He later learned from a reporter in New York that the two men were agents for the CIA.

McGuinness is a former scientific adviser to Hughes. He did not elaborate in the interview with CFAC about the CIA's alleged activities in Alberta.

A spokesman for Helen Hunley, Alberta solicitor-general, declined comment on McGuinness' statements.

Meanwhile, Harvie Andre, MP for Calgary Centre, said he wants some response from the federal government concerning McGuinness' claims.

He said it's possible the RCMP is aware of any CIA activities "but if their explanation is not sufficient, a full-fledged inquiry might well be in order."

THREATENED HOUSES teeter on the edge of a mile-wide landslide at Asbestos, Que., site of the world's largest open-pit asbestos mine. Police evacuated 45 families after the crack slithered up to the rim of the crater.

Civic Strike Ahead As Talks Collapse

A strike by 280 city outside workers within the next few days appeared inevitable following a breakdown of mediation efforts this morning.

Greater Victoria municipalities and the school board have stated they will respond to any single strike action with a general lockout of all 1,736 employees.

Mediation officer Clark Gilmour said he will submit his report on the dispute to Labor Minister Bill King today.

Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing city outside workers, has already posted strike notice but cannot legally act until informed by King that Gilmour's report has been received.

A general lockout is not possible either until Gilmour has submitted reports on the other contract disputes.

Gilmour said that he is submitting his report only on the Local 50 dispute today. Asked if he is is submitting reports on the other CUPE contract disputes in Greater Victoria, he said the Local 50 report is "the only one today."

Municipal negotiator E. E. Pearlman said the city is not prepared to move in the direction of the Port Alberni settlement with CUPE and will hold to its 15.76 per cent wage increase offer for 1975.

Base rate for city outside workers is $4.42 per hour but to match Port Alberni, this would have to increase to $5.40 per hour by July 1 and in addition provide for cost of living increases. Port Alberni workers' latest increase was from $4.49 an hour.

CUPE staff representative Tom Smith said the union expects to hear from King Thursday or Friday that Gilmour's report has been received.

He said the decision has not been made as to where the union will strike.

LONDON (AP) — Swiss authorities announced today a penalty charge of 40 per cent on all funds newly deposited from abroad by non-residents after the United States dollar hit a record low against the Swiss franc in currency trading. The "negative interest" boost to 40 per cent from 12 annually was Switzerland's most radical move yet to halt the rush on the franc.

MANILA (AP) — A fire swept a five-storey building in a Manila suburb today, killing at least 51 persons and seriously injuring at least 79, authorities said. It was the worst fire in Philippine history.

STANLEY PARK DRUG SLAYING

VANCOUVER (CP)—A drug dealer known to police in the Yukon and British Columbia was stalked through the dark underbrush of Stanley Park Tuesday night by a gunman who shot him repeatedly as he tried to escape.

The 23-year-old victim, bleeding heavily from three wounds, reached the safety of a roadway in the park about 8:30 p.m. and flagged down a passing motorist.

His attacker gave up the hunt. However, the victim, whose name has not been released, died before an ambulance arrived and became the city's first murder victim for 1975.

The victim reportedly told the motorist he had been shot at five times.

Homicide detectives said today the man had a record for soft drugs in Whitehorse and Vancouver. However, his body indicated that when he died he was a heroin addict.

Police working with flashlights through the night found tire marks, footprints and a trail of blood that criss-crossed a wide area of the park.

Detectives said they believe that the victim had run and possibly tried to hide behind trees while trying to escape from his assailant.

GUN PLEA FROM A-G

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald has issued an appeal to merchants to tighten up security on the sale of guns.

B.C. has no plans to introduce legislation concerning the sale of firearms, MacDonald said in an interview today, but he added he hoped gun merchants would live up to the "necessities of modern society".

"I would hope that stores that sell rifles and shotguns and even hand guns would themselves tighten up security . . . lock up their stock overnight . . . and be more careful than they have been because of the sad situations in Vancouver and Calgary," he said.

The minister said, however, federal laws should be strengthened to require registration of either all weapons or all persons who own guns.

Guns are sold across the counter in stores like any other merchandise, he said, and this shouldn't be allowed.

Stores should ensure ammunition and guns are not easily stolen and should make sure weapons do not fall into the hands of minors, said Macdonald.

Macdonald said he believes all types of guns should be registered under federal law because statistics garnered from coroners' reports on the lower mainland show a majority of recent shooting murders have been done with shotguns rather than pistols or hand guns.

Gunman Frees 3 Hostages

Times News Services

LONDON, Ont. — Police today handed over $10,000 and a pledge of safe escape to a gunman after he released three of four children he had held hostage for nearly 24 hours in a farmhouse at nearby Thamesford.

The three children were released shaken but unharmed at about 1:30 p.m. local time.

They were taken from the farmhouse by their father, George Field, 33, who had pleaded for their release with the gunman, a family friend named Donald Wayne Cline.

Within 30 minutes, police gave in to the gunman's demands for the money and a getaway car driven by an ex-convict friend.

"We are more interested in saving that kid's (remaining hostage) life, than in making any arrest," Ontario Provincial Police assistant commissioner J. L. Erskine said.

It was not immediately known whether the gunman had agreed to release his lone hostage, Robert Field, 12, before fleeing the scene.

Police earlier had said they would not meet the gunman's demands unless he released the hostages, held since about 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Det.-Insp. Dennis Alsop of the Ontario provincial police had earlier said the gunman might pose an even greater danger if allowed to leave the house with the hostages.

Insp. Alsop then said the four children — Donald, 11, Robert, 12, Kim, 7, and David, 4 — were all well and that police were checking them by phone periodically.

The gunman said in several telephone interviews during the night he had no intention of harming the children. He said repeatedly, "the only ones who can harm these children are the police."

Cline's mother who lives in another nearby community, New Sarum, said today that her son phoned her last night to say goodbye.

Mrs. Aaron Cline said she knew nothing about the incident until a woman phoned Tuesday night and said Wayne wanted to speak to her.

She told her son to give himself up.

"He said to me 'Mom, I've always wanted to die young,'" she said.

"I told Waynie . . . don't you hurt those children," Mrs. Cline said, "He said, 'Well, maybe they'll (the police) know how I'm hurt.'"

She said Wayne had known the children since they were babies and one of them, Donald Wayne, is named after him.

"Waynie went to live with George (the children's father) when he was only seven or eight years old," she said.

Cline also told Windsor, Ont., radio station CKLW today by phone that he believed his chances for survival were "not too good."

Asked if he planned to surrender, Cline said "never."

Gov't Applies News Muzzle on Knight Firing

Members of the education department's research and development staff have been told to keep quiet on the firing of the division's director Dr. Stanley Knight.

Seven members of the new division marched angrily into the office of education deputy Jack Fleming Tuesday and said they would voice their full support for Knight, who was dismissed last week.

They emerged nearly four hours later, however, saying they could not discuss any details of the meeting for fear of losing their jobs.

"We have been warned by . . . Fleming that we cannot disclose to the public of B.C. any matter concerning our meeting today, including the matter of support for the director Dr. Stanley Knight," said group spokesman Jean Burgess.

"If I disclose any such matters our jobs may be terminated under the terms of the oath of office."

Some of the division members are public servants who are still in their probationary period but others, hired as consultants, are not under the Public Service Commission.

Burgess said Fleming also warned them that the consultants, not bound by the oath of office, could also lose their jobs if they comment "on any aspect of this meeting."

Fleming would not divulge to the staff members or to the press the reasons behind Knight's dismissal.

The deputy has said from the start Knight's dismissal was a public service matter and since grievance procedures have been launched it would not be proper to discuss the reasons behind the action.

Dismissal came at the end of Knight's six-month probationary period which ends with a recommendation by the deputy for either dismissal or permanent appointment.

Knight was hired in July to set up the research and development division which was assigned to study the department's White Paper on educational change in B.C.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly has said the matter is purely one of personnel but the members of the division said Tuesday they still hope to meet with the minister to discuss the future of the group.

Fleming described the long meeting with staff members as involving a discussion of the future of the division.

An existing superintendent of the department will supervise the staff for the moment, he said, but a replacement for Knight will not be sought while his grievance is still pending.

Work will go on as usual with the group, he said, and Burgess confirmed that the members "want their jobs."

Knight has also asked Premier Barrett to intervene in the case but Barrett has said he has no intention of doing so.

No Olympics Deficit, Drapeau Still Insists

THE BETTER HALF By Barnes

"I see the TV industry is heavily into ecology . . . they're recycling all the old series."

QUEBEC (CP) — While Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau stressed before a government committee Tuesday that the 1976 Olympics would not incur a deficit, the head of the Games' organizing committee spoke of a minimum deficit of $209 million.

And while Mayor Drapeau told the committee that construction of a 70,000 seat stadium with a retractable roof could be finished on time, the organizing committee has commissioned studies on the possibility of tranpsorting an already-built stadium and reassembling it on the Olympics site.

Roger Rousseau, president of the organizing committee, told the standing committee on municipal affairs that as of Jan. 17, the committee anticipated revenues of $435 million and expenses of $644 million.

Revenues from the sale of commemorative coins, orginally estimated at $250 million, now are expected to drop to between $100 and $175 million, he said.

The Olympic lottery is expected to provide revenues of up to $200 million, more than six times the original estimate of $32 million.

But construction costs have grown to $544 million from an original $223 million estimate, Rousseau said.

Administration and operations, first estimated to amount to $64 million, will increase to $99 million.

At most, revenues will reach $435 million. At the least, they should be $335 million, he said.

Drapeau told the committee he still plans to make the Games self-financing.

"I will affirm that we must go as far as to refuse what is not self-financing," he said.

Drapeau repeated that there is no question of the taxpayers of Montreal, Quebec province or Canada having to pay the bill for the Games.

Self-financing is possible through such existing programs as the coin and stamp sales and the Olympic lottery.

Two of 13 Victims Were Shot

MONTREAL (CP)—Police say two victims of a massacre at a north-end nightclub Tuesday were shot, one fatally, while the other shooting victim and 11 innocent bystanders were asphyxiated in a deliberately-set fire to get rid of witnesses.

The manager and a client were both shot with a .22-calibre revolver, and "we believe everyone else was herded into a storeroom to get rid of witnesses," said Claude Desautels, assistant director of Montreal Urban Community police.

He said Rejean Fortin, 43-year-old manager of tre Gargantua Bar-Salon, was shot through the heart while patron Pierre Lamarche, 29, was shot in the stomach.

Pathologists said Fortin died of the wound but that Lamarche died of asphyxiation—as did the 11 others the return portion may have been voided before the person took off, thus netting the agent an extra bonus.

Cook said many of the "visitors" would not have been able to meet the stringent Canadian immigration regulations, especially those pertaining to education and occupation criteria.

He said once the visitor had passed through customs and immigration he would have simply "disappeared."

There would have been no difficulty obtaining a social insurance number, Cook contended, and there is no mechanism to check out illegal immigrants through Canadian income tax departments.

Cook was unable to say how widespread the problem was in Canada though he pointed to England where the illegal immigrant is a "serious concern" and the United States where it is estimated between five to 15 million people are living and working without legal landed immigrant status.

He stressed, however, schemes to bring people into Canada illegally were not unique to East Indians.

"Almost every ethnic group has its own agent living off his own people," he said.

"The Chinese, throughout their 100 year-plus association with us have been notorious in this regard . . . and many other nationalities have had fantastic agents working to bring subjects into Canada."

Perhaps one of the most bizarre — and tragic — occurred last month with the arrival of 18 young men from Tonga at Vancouver International airport.

When asked what their purpose was for coming here they replied with a beguiling candor:

"Why we've come to work . . . our agent in Tonga told us all we had to do was come here and we'd get a job."

Needless to say they were ushered hastily onto the next plane back to Tonga.

As they were about to leave an immigration officer asked them what they were going to do when they got home.

A rugged representative responded: "Well I think the first thing we'll do is some hitting on that agent's head."

Cambodian Airlift?

Times News Services

PHNOM PENH—A 20-ship supply convoy from Vietnam ran into heavy rebel resistance on the Mekong River today and a U.S source said there is "no other choice" than an American Berlin-style airlift if the convoy doesn't make it.

The convoy, reported halfway up the Mekong to Phnom Penh, was the first serious attempt in 25 days to replenish the besieged Cambodian capital with badly needed fuel and ammunition.

Fuel to power electric generators in Phnom Penh is so low that more than 80 per cent of the electricity has been cut. Food supplies are dropping radically and within two weeks the situation will be critical.

The convoy tugs took heavy fire all night Tuesday and into the day today.

Meanwhile, in Saigon the Viet Cong said today that President Ford's announcement that he will ask the U.S. Congress for an additional $300 million in military aid for the South Vietnamese government shows the intention of the United States "to sabotage the Paris peace accords more seriously."

MPs Convinced On Pay—Sharp

OTTAWA (CP)—Most Liberal MPs returned from Christmas vacation "satisfied we should proceed" with their controversial salary increases, Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp said Tuesday.

But following a two-day party caucus, he made it clear that the bill to give MPs and senators a 33-1-3-per-cent increase will not have a high priority when Parliament resumes today.

"There are quite a number of other bills which will come ahead of the pay-raise bill," he told reporters.

The special caucus was called to discuss long-term government policies, and reports indicated that considerable time was devoted to economics, energy, housing and transportation. But the salary issue was one of the first discussed.

As he emerged from caucus, Sharp said no new salary proposals are under consideration.

"They the MPs came back satisfied we should proceed."

Sharp said the pay-raise bill is not a government proposal in the usual sense of the word. MPs from all parties supported it initially "and we want to make sure that remains the situation" before bringing it up again.

Walter Baker, acting Conservative House leader, disagreed.

"It's a government bill. Mr. Sharp would like to gather all MPs to his bosom when he's in trouble."

MPs currently earn $26,000 a year including an $8,000 tax-free expense allowance. Senators are paid $22,000 including a $4,000 allowance.

The original 50-per-cent proposal would have boosted MPs to $39,000-$27,000 in salary and $12,000 in allowance. Senators would have gone to $33,000-$27,000 salary and $6,000 allowance.

The last salary increase for MPs and senators was approved in June, 1971, when they raised their over-all pay 50 per cent, retroactive to the previous October.

TOTS HELD HOSTAGE

The drama began shortly before afternoon Tuesday when four men robbed a Thamesford supermarket.

Moments later, police roadblocks ringed the area and the men's abandoned car was found a short time later.

Two police officers, OPP Constable P. J. Vallier and London Det. Fred Schell, entered a nearby farmhouse, the Field home, in search of the suspects.

Although details are still sketchy, they apparently were met by an armed man who took their service revolvers.

Donna Field, 31, mother of the four children, was in the house at the time and she said later two or three shots were fired.

The officers managed to escape.

The gunman then sent Mrs. Field out to seek an understanding with police, leaving the children as hostages.

Later in the evening, a tearful Mrs. Field told reporters the gunman said he was "not going to leave the house alive."

In another incident, details of which also were sketchy, Gail Guest, a friend of the gunman, arrived on the scene and entered the house.

Police have refused to confirm or deny that she came at the gunman's request.

During the evening, the gunman spelled out his demands for the release of the children — $10,000 in cash, a radio-equipped car and a safe escape route.

A provincial police spokesman said it took most of the night to collect the ransom money, put together in Toronto.

Instant Open House . . .

Mary Adams brought the house down Tuesday when she slammed her front door in Stockport, England. One side of the two-storey house fell sideways into the River Mersey. Most of the rest of the building collapsed into rubble.

Mrs. Adams said later: "The door was a little stiff so I gave it a good bang. I was amazed. I have thought for some time that the building was not quite right."

SCHOOLS CLOSED AT NANAIMO

NANAIMO — Forty-three public schools remained closed today as teachers honored picket lines set up by locked-out members of Local 606 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

District superintendent of schools Douglas Weicker said schools will remain closed until further notice.

Nanaimo school board Tuesday locked out its 175 non-teaching employees, members of CUPE 606, ending a 10-day rotating strike.

Glen Pleuckhahn, president of the Nanaimo District Teachers Association, said teachers will report to school each morning.

If pickeiers refuse them permission to cross the lines, the teacher will attend in-service meetings instead.

School board chairman Joe Kilner said today the board may decide to stop paying teachers while they refuse to cross the picket lines, but that action or any other punitive action against teachers hasn't yet been discussed.

The board meets tonight.

Prices Spurt In Vancouver

Times News Services

OTTAWA—Food prices in Vancouver spurted ahead at the fastest rate of major centres in Canada last month. (Prices in Victoria are considered equal to, or higher then, prices on the Mainland.)

Figures released by Statistics Canada Tuesday showed that food prices in Vancouver were up 2.5 per cent in December, 20 per cent higher than December, 1973.

The overall price index rose 1.2 per cent in December in Ottawa and Vancouver. The Ottawa boost was attributed to factors other than food.

In Ottawa, the food index rose by 2.4 per cent.

This index had gone up by nine-tenths of one per cent the previous month and in October it declined by three-tenths of one per cent.

The Food Prices Review Board surveyed and published prices in several supermarkets in various parts of Ottawa during a five-week pilot project which ended late October.

The smallest increase in a food index in December was seven-tenths of one per cent in Toronto.

The Statistics Canada surveys of prices in various cities measure price changes within the cities but do not measure whether costs of living are cheaper between cities.

The cities surveys follow the same procedure as used for preparing the national consumer price index figures.

Vancouver had the largest increase in the over-all price index in this 12 months to December, up 14.1 per cent, and Halifax had the smallest increase, up 10.1 per cent.

Food price indexes have gone up faster than any other components of the price indexes.

The 12-month rise in the food price indexes were: Vancouver, 20 per cent; Halifax, 19 per cent; Winnipeg, 18 per cent; Toronto and Thunder Bay 17.9 per cent; Saskatoon-Regina, 17.8 per cent; Quebec City, 17.2 per cent; Montreal, 16.7 per cent; Saint John, 16 per cent; Edmonton-Calgary, 14.8 per cent; and Ottawa 14 per cent.

Oil and the West Coast

Through a glass darkly, as if smeared with thick gobs of tarry crude oil, we view a procession of events in which even the most cautious observer can see the dangers of destroying numberless forms of sea life and fouling our coastline for years and years.

This month, a Japanese supertanker, much like the ones which will soon be transporting oil from Alaska down British Columbia's coast, ran aground near Singapore in one of the world's busiest waterways. Crude oil spilled onto the shores of three nations.

Last August, in the worst oil spill ever, a most modern Shell tanker ran aground in the Strait of Magellan at the southern tip of South America and spilled 30 million gallons of crude oil.

The most recent oil spill close to home occurred just outside Vancouver harbor. Luckily neither vessel involved was a tanker, and a relatively small amount of oil (compared to the mammoth spills elsewhere in the world) escaped to blacken West Vancouver beaches.

Connecting both incidents, however, is a common denominator — both resulted from human error. In the South American disaster, an error in navigation caused the accident. "One way or another they cut the corner and hit the curb," said an environmental scientist.

In the Vancouver accident, inexplicably the pilot of the inbound vessel didn't see the oncoming freighter — though it was a clear moonlit night — until too late to avoid collision. Human error again.

The result of human error, in the Strait of Magellan spill, was that enough oil was dumped into the sea to cover more than a thousand square miles. If it had occurred in these waters, such a colossal ecological catastrophe would have wiped out Puget Sound and Georgia Strait. Yet tankers of similar size are going to be coming here regularly before the end of the decade.

What the South American spill also taught scientists was that the industry has probably under-estimated the risks involved in transporting crude oil in supertankers (or Very Large Crude Carriers, as the industry calls them — they're very crude indeed) through tricky waterways. The amount of oil spilled in the Strait of Magellan was "out of line with what the industry has been saying is the maximum potential spill in a tanker this size," said one scientist.

With these examples before us, what's the latest news on the controversy concerning the west coast oil tanker route? New U.S. coast guard regulations apparently will permit single-hulled tankers to carry Alaskan oil to the American mainland. The U.S. department of transportation, which oversees the coast guard, stands accused by the environment-minded interior department of "welshing" on an understanding that double-bottom hulls were to be mandatory.

Last summer, when the coast guard issued a preliminary draft of its regulations, the U.S. interior secretary let loose: "Failure to require the incorporation of double bottoms on all new tank vessels entering the Alaska oil trade represents a serious error which may adversely affect the environment of Alaska, Canada, the Northwestern U.S. and, indirectly, the entire world for decades."

That was no hairy wild-eyed ecology freak talking, but rock-ribbed Republican Rogers Morton, a member of Richard Nixon's cabinet and still in President Gerald Ford's administration. Nothing half as strong seems to have come from his Canadian counterparts.

If Canada, with the still vivid examples of Singapore and the Strait of Magellan, doesn't protest at least as loudly, then the blame for the inevitable disastrous oil spill on the west coast will lie as much with Ottawa as Washington, D.C.

A Victory of Sorts

The Victoria-Ottawa dispute over natural gas taxation has rounded the corner, cleared three hurdles and is faced with a forest of future obstacles, anyone of which could take both parties back to the starting line. British Columbia has agreed to pay directly to Ottawa the federal tax on the difference between a federal "fair market value" of 57 cents per thousand and the 22 cents per thousand cubic feet which companies currently receive from the provincial marketing agency. In addition Ottawa agreed to increase export gas price levels this summer, and will not levy a new gas export tax in the foreseeable future.

Yet to be resolved is how much the amount paid directly to Ottawa will increase when the export price of gas rises to an undetermined level this summer, and how much of any new increase will be passed on to the producing companies. Either of these issues could lead to another Victoria-Ottawa impasse. Nor has Premier Barrett solved related questions of how high the domestic price of natural gas will rise. Will provincial fuel oil users continue to pay escalating prices while gas customers are charged artifically low rates? And what about the question of gas revenue-sharing between the provincial government and B.C. municipalities?

Casting these doubts aside, the immediate victory belongs to Barrett. He has ensured that gas exploration will go ahead this winter, he has effected a solution to a jarring federal-provincial dispute, if only for a moment, and he has prevented private gas companies from reaping extra profits as the fallout of federal-provincial taxation dispute. This last measure may not sit well with unbridled private enterprisers, but the gas companies are not complaining under the current arrangement. And few people in this day and age would disagree with government that the lion's share of revenue from non-renewable resources should go to public coffers, rather than private ones, especially private ones that are foreign-owned in large degree.

About the only measure Barrett didn't achieve was an immediate rise in the price of exported natural gas. Federal reluctance on this issue was understandable, considering the large price hikes to American customers in the recent past. To immediately raise the export gas price from $1 to $1.35 per thousand cubic feet might be practical economically although Americans would look on it as a form of extortion, and Canada would have a difficult time morally justifying another large hike in price at this time. Beginning with his doomed three-way split on gas revenues, Barrett has played a canny game of footsy with Ottawa these past two weeks. To emerge unscathed with an acceptable solution is to his credit. But these are unforeseeable times and Ottawa could slap an export tax on natural gas at any time as it did on Alberta oil. Only time will tell whether the victory — a word the premier has carefully avoided — is a Pyrrhic one.

W. A. WILSON

Otto Lang Breaks a Tradition

OTTAWA—There seems to be no absolute tradition about it in Canadian politics but more often than not in modern times, the federal minister of justice has been a member of the Roman Catholic church.

The pattern is so well-established that it amounts at least to a tradition in the making, if not a wholly-accepted one. It is necessary to go back to Stuart Garson, minister of justice in Louis St. Laurent's day, to find a Protestant who has held the portfolio for any length of time although one other, Donald Fleming, presided over the department briefly towards the end of the Diefenbaker period. Both Garson and Fleming were United Churchmen.

Otherwise, the pattern that this key portfolio normally goes to a Catholic holds—Otto Lang, John Turner, Pierre Trudeau, Lucien Cardin, Guy Favreau, Davie Fulton, Louis St. Laurent, Ernest Lapointe.

When something is done habitually in this way in the world of politics and government, it is sensible to assume that there is a reason for it and that the pattern has not come about as the freak result of some political roulette wheel.

Brake on Change

The presence of a Catholic at the justice ministry introduces an element of social conservatism into a key area of government. It is likely to act as a brake upon change, helping slow it to safe rates. This may be frustrating to those who seek rapid change in the country's laws and statutes to keep pace with the rate at which change is taking place within society. Nonetheless, this is in fact a country where basic divisions go deep. They are religious, linguistic and cultural. The devices political leaders adopt to keep these fundamental differences from becoming dangerously divisive are not to be scoffed at.

There is, of course, a corollary to this. Canada is about equally Catholic and Protestant, if those who are neither one nor the other are excluded. It is an unwritten law, in this pattern of keeping the justice portfolio in Catholic hands as a general rule, that the man who is there will conduct himself with restraint and balance. He is expected to exercise a conservative influence but at the same time not to make use of his official position to enforce on non-Catholics moral positions which have their basis in Catholic theology.

The prime minister and John Turner both provided good examples, in their periods at the justice ministry, of the ways in which the sought-after balance is achieved. As justice minister, Trudeau introduced—and Turner subsequently carried through parliament—changes in the criminal code which clarified the law on abortion and made it considerably more available to Canadian women under safe conditions than it had been previously.

They did this although abortion is, of course, forbidden to Catholics. They recognized, quite correctly, that Canada is not a theocratic state and that as ministers they must sponsor legislation for Catholics and non-Catholics alike.

OTTO LANG
. . . under attack on abortion

The way in which their catholicism showed was in the conservative nature of the changes they sponsored in the law on abortion. The power of decision was left to hospital committees. Because of the power of older doctors in hospital structures, these are likely to be more conservative than many individual members of the profession would be. And of course, they framed the law so that where the hospitals are under Catholic control, facilities for abortion would not be brought into existence.

The controversy that has now developed around the present justice minister, Otto Lang, stems primarily from the fact that he is being insensitive to the constraints that are generally accepted as applying to Catholics in the office. He has created the strong impression that he is in fact seeking to use his official position, his share of state power, to impose on others positions that are inherent in Catholic dogma. He would deny this as he denies that he is seeking to usurp powers that belong to the courts.

The sharp criticism of the justice minister from the head of the Canadian Medical Association, Dr. Bette Stephenson, shows how strongly his positions are resented by some important parts of society. She has made it clear that she and a significant proportion of her medical colleagues feel that Lang's hectoring is an attempt to apply pressures on them that ought not to be coming from the justice minister. That would also be the impression many people have been left with by following Lang's statements over recent months. To a reasonable man, he seems to have been trying to pressure the hospital committees into accepting his personal views.

No Private Citizen

At the same time, he leaves the impression that he is seeking to take over the function of the courts to interpret the law, although in fairness he denies this with some vigor. I think myself that he genuinely believes that he is simply taking a vigorous part in a controversy. The difficulty is that he has no means of separating his functions. As long as he is at the justice ministry, he cannot speak out as a private citizen. Any statements he makes carry the weight of his office.

As a matter of historical fact, the justice minister is not correct in his usual explanations of parliament's intent when it passed the criminal code amendments in 1969. The intent presumably varied with individual parliamentarians, but the law had an element of vagueness which its sponsors admitted at the time was deliberate. Abortions are permitted where the mother's health requires it and the word "health" was left undefined as a deliberate and conscious act of policy, not through careless drafting of the bill presented to parliament. The intention, expressed clearly enough in conversations at the time, was to leave the interpretation of that key word to the hospitals' medical committees.

Youthful Push

On Saturday, Jan. 11 about 4:00 p.m. I was experiencing great difficulty navigating Victoria's icy hills, due to the fresh snowfall on top of existing ice. Approaching the traffic lights at Richmond and Lansdowne travelling eastward, I was assisted by a group of healthy well-motivated teenagers who gave me the slight push needed to get through the traffic light.

If it had not been for the further hill on the other side of the light and the terrible traffic conditions I should have liked to have stopped and returned to personally compliment these fine youngsters. Not knowing their names I would like to take this opportunity to do so. Certainly other motorists assisted by these fine examples of Victoria youth must feel equally grateful. — Alfred G. Porcher, 3660 Cadboro Bay Road.

Bow Hunting

An article in one newspaper states "a person must be qualified for bow hunting" but the qualification seems to be that the applicant must have received a certain number of hours of hunter training, which applies to gun hunting.

One writer, who is an official of a bow club, pointed out "a bow hunter shouldn't go out after game until he has fired 2,000 arrows."

It therefore seems irresponsible to allow anyone with a bow and arrow to practise on deer, yet there seems to be no deterrent. All that is needed is a hunting licence, a bow licence, a special permit and permission from a land owner, money for licences of course, but no proficiency qualification for bow hunting.

Two suggestions are evident. The first: that the immediate situation in Saanich be dealt with by following a suggestion in a recent letter that "one or two capable marksmen could be delegated to do the job quickly and efficiently, then see that the meat goes to needy families." Perhaps a bow club would provide the capable marksmen to cooperate with the Fish and Wildlife Branch for this community service. If it is not possible to provide skillful and sufficiently practised archers, then the suggestion is that the season be ended now instead of in March.

SAANICH DEER
. . . delegate marksmen

The other suggestion is that, in future the fish and wildlife branch institute some way of ensuring proficiency in bow hunting before licences are issued.

Letters from readers who endorse these suggestions might accelerate some improvements if sent to the fish and wildlife branch of the provincial government. — E. Kathleen Riley, 5327 Parker Avenue.

Laughing Stock

May I through your columns commend Mayor Peter Pollen for his stand in favor of amalgamation of the four core municipalities of this area?

I have found that, notwithstanding what other mayors may think, every taxpayer in each of these municipalities whom I have approached on this topic, has agreed that we should amalgamate. They, like Mayor Pollen, see the waste in proliferation and duplication of services, the sad lack of co-ordination in planning, the general laughing-stock kind of mess in which we live.

Please, in this tight remote little corner of Canada, let us not carry our xenophobia to the point where we of one municipality fear to join hands with neighbors across the street who live in a different municipality. Let us be one. — Pollenite.

Dumping Ground

The Beacon Hill Park Association opposes a recent suggestion that the 80-foot "art deco" tower be moved from a causeway service station to Beacon Hill Park. Withholding any opinion we might have on the cultural value of the "miniature 1930ish Chicago skyscraper," we wish to point out that it would be unsuitable, and appear foreign within the natural beauty of the park. Although our worries are alleviated by the sheer weight of this solid concrete object, we are concerned that Beacon Hill park is still being considered as a dumping ground for unnecessary and gimmicky intrusions such as the jogging track which was recently proposed by a group seeking an L.I.P. grant (one is free to jog anywhere in the park now), and the construction of a pioneer village, which would only duplicate what is already being planned for the Saanich peninsula. We maintain, as before, that the city should look elsewhere if it wishes to continue to provide for every minority group. The majority still go to the park for a little rest from what is becoming a hectic city. — John Newberry, president, BHPA, 916 Fort Street.

Excellent Article

It warms one's heart to read your recent article about Mrs. McIver and the so-called Priory Method. Nothing is too good for our senior citizens. In all fairness however, it must be pointed out that these methods are in use at all extended care hospitals in Victoria.

It must also be remembered that these hospitals are entirely paid for by the taxpayer and have no property or business tax to pay. The average amount allotted per person is $30 a day whereas in our few remaining excellent private hospitals, a welfare patient is allotted only $17 a day. Why this discrepancy? This of course means that such persons cannot receive the same quality care which is described as the Priory Method. However, this was an excellent and informative article though I feel that possibly the "semi-nude dangling catheter bit" was a trifle overdone. — Richard Spicer, MD., 645 Fort Street.

Craigdarroch Castle

The very wide appeal of Victoria's Craigdarroch Castle is shown in this letter from Mr. and Mrs. James W. McGrath of Winston-Salem, North Carolina:

"We visited Craigdarroch Castle in 1973. It is a beautiful landmark that must be preserved. We enjoyed having the opportunity to experience the greatness of the castle.

"While we were there we shot quite a bit of movie film, which we've enjoyed since we've been at home. It helps us remember the grandeur of Craigdarroch. We wish you much success in 1975."

With this letter came a $25 cheque, to help the preservation and restoration of Craigdarroch.

Restoration is proceeding at Craigdarroch, but slowly. The castle society asks the co-operation of all in Greater Victoria in this very worthwhile project. It is very often an uphill struggle, despite the great success of the donation box, which last year brought in $28,000, all of which is being expended on the castle. — James K. Nesbitt, president, Castle Preservation Society.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of January 22, 1915

NEW YORK — Henry Ford of Detroit, millionaire manufacturer of automobiles, will guarantee to take every convict out of Sing Sing prison and make a man of him. He so stated today, when he appeared to testify before the U.S. commission on industrial relations, which is investigating the great philanthropic foundations of the country and the cause for industrial unrest. "The philanthropic foundations may do some good, but they are not adequate," said Ford. "My idea is justice and not charity." He proposed to hire the convicts and pay them adequate wages to work in his automobile plants.

Solzhenitsyn Takes Self-Righteous Path

By GEORGE FEIFER
The Times of London

Alexander Solzhenitsyn urges the Russian people to face death rather than accept more lies from their literature or government. He pronounces the British people as a whole guilty of forcibly repatriating Soviet prisoners of war in 1945 because no public repentance has been made. He calls on the world to make moral revolution.

How much more enlightening the Russian novelist would be in his new teaching role if he came to grips with his own occasional accommodations with evil. As a labor camp prisoner resolved to win the desperate battle to live, he submitted to some of the vicious pressures to collaborate and inform, while others acted on the pattern of his current advice — and died.

No reasonable man can condemn him for an instant; no one who has not endured what he did has the right. Vastly enriched by his survival, we can only cheer his extraordinary toughness, resourcefulness and luck.

But we need not swallow his categorical denunciation of others' compromises, which only obfuscates his own experience, together with the eternal conflit of conscience and the desire for well-being.

After his release from labor camp and exile, Solzhenitsyn lived quietly and wrote secretly.

His choice of time and tactics for delivering his messages — when to stay silent while other Russian writers were persecuted; when to proclaim his breathtaking challenges to Soviet censors and dictators — was masterful.

But although his compromises were made to preserve his immensely important work from destruction, it is deluding to pretend that compromises as such are wicked, or should be called something different when made for one's own part in a cause.

Having survived his fearful trials and attained his unique position, the courageous and brilliant Solzhenitsyn has taken to a moral absolutism he did not always apply to himself when he was at the level of lesser men.

Far from a personal matter, this is one of the sources of unhealthiness beginning to weaken Russian forces in opposition to Soviet rule.

If history is any guide, Solzhenitsyn's need to preach far and wide may lead the Soviet Union on yet another detour from the very freedom and openness for which he has done so much.

The unhealthiness is manifested in a domineering attitude toward others and acts of narrow self-assertion that few mention publically now, but are common knowledge among politically conscious Russian emigres, and will be important to historians analyzing wrong turns in the movement.

In print and interviews Solzhenitsyn's scorn for Russians guilty of little besides not keeping step with him — those who fail his conception of their duty by emigrating and others who, as he sees it, trade on their reputation as dissidents — appears to be waxing as the KGB pressure on him wanes.

In private some of his former helpers, including a few who effaced themselves serving him, have been disowned in terms suggesting they are traitors. His erstwhile aides grow more bitter at his overbearing attitude.

Often Solzhenitsyn seems tirelessly demanding not only of associates' general commitment to a reformed Soviet Union but also of utter loyalty and conformity to his way.

Should one who appeals for a moral revolution be quite so quick to take anger, not only at labor camp killers, but also former intimates with whom he now disagrees? Is this where the goodness and wisdom needed to heal the Soviet Union lies?

In the new exile atmosphere, one's own mistakes in judgment are passed over in the eagerness to specify others — which are equated with moral sin.

It is entirely right that the awfulness of repatriating Soviet prisoners of war should be recognized, but it would be more real and relevant to set an example of self-repentance rather than telling the British people to expiate Winston Churchill's mistakes.

As it is, editors and publishers, religious leaders and other Russian dissidents — everyone and every institution not measuring up is castigated; wrath deserved by the KGB is also unleashed on unwitting violators of some sensibility.

Humility and tolerance, the qualities the Soviet Union needs most, are driven from the democratic movement, together with many thoughtful Russians who want progress, but no part in new crusades.

Clean as Solzhenitsyn seems to break from the Russian pattern under Soviet rule, he sometimes fits a larger one of a half-mystical wise man teaching others how to live. Much of the Soviet Union's sorrow comes precisely from this urge to undertake the awesome role of universal prophet and to supply appropriately simplified answers to great problems.

The inevitable result of Solzhenitsyn's outpouring of pronouncements, threats to sue for slander and warnings to those who might use the freedom of the press to find out more about him is to deflect attention from his own unsurpassed contribution to recording the scope of the Soviet Union's socialist tragedy.

No one has done more to tell the world once and for all about the mistakes and crimes: in this sense, he has been a single-handed force of history. No one is better endowed or positioned to help the Soviet Union inch away from its troubles.

But each shallow, gratuitous sermon to the Western press, for example, detracts from his own purpose and stature while discouraging those he needs most to attract.

In some cases, his double standard — one for himself, the other for his flock — is glaring. In one breath, he calls on Russian writers to tell the whole truth; in the next, he describes his own self-censorship on works he hoped would be published while he was still in the Soviet Union. Consumed by a sense of mission, he may genuinely see no contradiction in such statements, although The Gulag Archipelego is full of them.

On the other hand, this same sense of mission, which is the father of the miracle of Solzhenitsyn, is our benefactor. It would be vile ingratitude to demand from him, who has suffered so much and given so many insights as a result of it, that he be free of the very anger and conception of self that drove him to his stunning achievements.

The real question is why his readers and those who have witnessed his troubling sides remain silent.

▣

Many Moscow correspondents have long felt uneasy because of contradictions between his Christian teaching and some aspects of his own behavior, but have abstained from comment because of possible harm to his great good work.

Others feared the sting of his pen or tongue — which, buttressed by his immense authority, could badly lash anyone who displeased him. And outside the Soviet Union some Soviet specialists have equated any criticism as betrayal of the oppressed fighters for Russian freedom.

But it is precisely this attitude toward criticism that may undermine Solzhenitsyn's superb work. The encumbrances of his campaign — the cult trappings, indiscriminate indignation, distorted sense of proportion — do not represent the liberal Russian tradition, but have a non-democratic flavor.

At the very least, the holy-seeming crusade for a world cause will almost certainly promote bitter factionalism within "the movement."

Far from discrediting him, open discussion of his illusions as well as his truths might prevent the slide to myth-making which, together with the inevitable accompanying disillusionment, is the bane of Russian history. This is the daunting task facing his admirers.

Scientists Indict Ottawa Planning

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The last place from which one expects to hear thorough and serious criticisms of the federal government is an agency of that government. Yet the Science Council of Canada, a federal Crown corporation recently published a "background study" which indicates as wooly and inferior both the planning and capacities and the administrative skills and stamina of the prime minister and his most senior advisers — the men at or around the top of the Ottawa pyramid.

The authors of the study are young: One, Peter Aucoin, is a political scientist; the other, Richard French, a historian of science. Their pamphlet, Knowledge, Power and Public Policy, has some 85 pages of text. Though far from a thriller, it is exciting enough for anyone who worries about the capacity of big government to handle the problems of our time.

Reduced to one sentence, Aucoin and French say the Trudeau government botched in conception and execution its ministries of state; that the conception has been a bad failure in the field of science; that it has been only marginally successful in urban affairs. The reasons for the failure are traced back to a grand enthusiasm for a magic phrase much tossed around Ottawa five or six years ago — to wit: "Knowledge is power."

Led by the prime minister, the cerebralists began to think out in 1968 and 1969 how to convert this truism that "knowledge is power" into a more effective government. Among ideas of "participatory democracy" and proper structure and flow of bodies and decisions was the idea of ministers of state. As Aucoin and French say, such ministries were "an attempt to alter, in the most fundamental way, the scope and nature of cabinet decision making."

The ministries of state were designed "Both to increase the flexibility and prerogative of the government in dealing with 'priority problems' and to enshrine rational analysis and planning in place of the interplay of traditional sources of power in the cabinet."

The young authors wryly refer to the birth of the ministries of state as happening in "the foreshortened golden age of planning in Ottawa."

They are referring to those exciting early years of the 1968-1972 Trudeau administration when reason and knowledge were the fountain heads of inspiration and long-term planning the highest goal, all under the guidance of a philosopher king of a prime minister.

Ho! ho! a Grit reader will say, there's Fisher waxing sarcastic again on the Prime Minister and events of the past.

While it is true that this golden age ended abruptly in October, 1972, with the near defeat of the government, after that we heard much of the efficacy of the Liberal politician and "being political," as distinct from the recently extolled 'symmetry of bureaucracy and the beauties of the administrative structure. For example, Keith Davey had a resurrection; in the crunch, even Mrs. Trudeau came forth to chat about a loving and caring prime minister. The cold, logic engine of the prime minister as rational leader disappeared for 21 months or so.

If Trudeau had remained in his sensitized "political" condition as between October, 1972, and July, 1974, my comments above would be merely snide. But recently, for example, at his pre-Christmas press conference, he was back to being philosopher king and touting the worth of the rational and the planned in the "collegial" system of government which he is putting into place. It sounds very much like the dispensation which produced the conception, the introduction, and the failures of the ministers of state for science and for urban affairs. There were also such failed or failing creations as Information Canada or DREE (where has it gone?)

Aucoin and French are a delight when describing the grand expectations of that short, lost golden age. For example: "Ministers of state were to be agents of the rational pursuit of governmental goals and co-ordinators of at least some of the policies and programs of departmental fiefdoms, although they were not to become massive bureaucracies themselves. Rather, their influence was to be brought to bear through the excellence of the information, analysis and policy developed by their staff."

But the authors suggest other less noble reasons for the creation of the ministries. There was a need for the government to be seen doing something in certain fields and to do so without confronting the provinces constitutionally. There was also the need to find a few more cabinet posts. Why did the ministries and the ministers fail? (We're talking here variously of Alastair Gillespie, Jeanne Sauve, Bud Drury, Bob Andras, Ron Basford and Barney Danson, all of whom have languished briefly as ministers of state.)

Answer: The prime minister and the top mandarins didn't stand behind the ministries. Indeed, they hardly seemed to recognize what it was they had created, after it was done. The senior bureaucracy in the line departments screwed the new ministers and ministries at every turn, whereas the centralized and most powerful bureaucracies of the Treasury Board, the PCO and the PMO, found them a nuisance rather than a new bureaucratic plant to be nurtured until growth and strength were assured. The appointments to the ministries (with the exception of Drury) have all been of weak to middling or unproven politicians.

But fundamentally the authors see the failure as an indication that one cannot inspire the political will with knowledge and analysis when that political will must be exercised through a large, entrenched bureaucracy with many points of control. These points are manned by able men much concerned about authority, ranking and programs — in a phrase holding the status as is!

The original conception of the horizontal ministry of knowledge and study and analysis was lacking in realism, say Aucoin and French. More serious, indeed fatal, to the conception, was the lack of resolve at the political level. When bureaucrats or managers are not forced to make a new conception work by their political bosses, then it fails.

Where the Admis Roam

RUSSELL BAKER

One recent Sunday, wearied by my efforts to determine whether Dr. Doolittle's duck was named Dabbab, Dabnab or Dabrab, I fell into a doze and crashed through the paper into Crosswordland.

I recognized it immediately, for admis were grazing under a dhava and an ai hung from a tondo in one of the salas. I was delighted, for I had never believed in the existence of the admi, the dhava or the ai, and had never expected to see a tondo or a sala.

I had always assumed that these were simply words created by tormented puzzle makers to help them escape their hopeless traps, but there was no mistaking them. The admis were definitely admis (African gazelles). The dhava was unmistakably an East Indian gum tree, and I could tell from the way the ai hung from the tondo (circular painting) that he was indeed a sloth.

The salas (reception rooms) in which I found myself (ego) contained three other persons. They were Ava (Miss Gardner), Evita (Peron), and Monk (Jazzman Thelonious). They were ired (angry) about being trite (overworked) Ava averred (stated) that she has to appear in every puzzle ever created. Evita and Monk expounded (delineated) in like (similar) vein (circulatory aide).

★ ★ ★

"Estop (stop) delineating in similar circulatory aide," I told them (No. 1 stated others), "and show me this strange place." "Eerie locus." Ava corrected. "Or more properly, since this is many places, eerie loci."

"Egad," said Monk. "Bah," said Evita. "Hah," said Ava. (Exclamation.) They would not abet (help), but fortunately Etta (Miss Kett) entered just then with Como (Perry or Lake) and took me to see the ort and ana.

The ort (scrap) was in an ugly mood and kept trying to pick a clash (fight) with the ana (miscellany). They made such a clang (loud noise) that both Arcas (Zeus' son) and Irus ("Odyssey" beggar) admitted (entered) to perceive (see) what was errant (wrong). Arcas warned (threatened) to break the ort's ulna (arm bone) and Irus told the ana he would take him on a Hadj (trek to Mecca) and leave him with an emeer (sheik of Araby) or emir (sheik of Araby: var.), or possibly an amah (Eastern nurse) nisi. (Caesar's "unless") he kept quiet.

★ ★ ★

"There must be an inexhaustible supply of emeers, emirs and amahs in Crosswordland," I observed to Etta.

"Aye," she said. (Affirmative.) "We have a rare (unusual) population mass (density). There are almost as many emeers and emirs as Utes and Otoes. Onondagas, Portuguese, Ukrainians and Ghanaians are unknown here, but we have more Celts than Eire (Ireland)."

The zoology of Crosswordland is equally bizarre. The woods are filled with beasts such as the admi, the ai, the zebu, the kudu and the ibex, although the elephant, the bullfrog, the tomcat, the cockroach and most other zoological forms common in the outer world are unknown.

Etta and I entered a new time span. "Here," she said, "is a genuine Apap (Egyptian month)." I did not like the Apap. It reminded me too painfully of the Sunday a puzzle had defeated me because I could not produce the world for "Of bronze: Latin" (aen) because the crossed word for "Egyptian month" was Apap instead of Epup, as any sensible person would naturally have expected Egyptians to name a month.

I told Etta I should prefer to see Meton (moon plain) if it was convenient.

★ ★ ★

To my delight, nothing was more facile (easier). In Crosswordland, Meton lies between Adano (bell-town) and the vast vale (valley) of prefixes and suffixes. Thus was I able to glimpse it over ences (noun suffixes), dento (tooth: prefix), itol (chemical suffix), endo (within: prefix), exo (outer: prefix), ano (upward: prefix) and acu (prefix for puncture).

I felt emotionally anolifted by the spectacle, for there on Meton was my familiar old Otsu (Honshu town), and on the outskirts of Otsu an Aani (dog-headed ape) stood under a nabo (P.I. shrub: var.) eating an awn (barley beard).

"If you're going to sleep," said my roommate, "let me have the puzzle. What's the name of Dr. Doolittle's duck?"

"I forgot to ask," I wept.

Vancouver Stock Exchange Lowers Boom on Six Firms

The Vancouver Stock Exchange has lowered the boom on six companies, suspending them from trading, in a year-end clean-up on overdue reports.

The six companies suspended in January are:

Anchor Mines, Coronation Allied Industries, Jason Explorers Ltd., Silverquick Development Co., Payette River Mines and Western Buff Mines and Oils Ltd.

The suspensions are for failing to file financial reports within the exchange or the shareholders.

In addition, the provincial securities commission has slapped cease-trading orders on four of the companies — Anchor, Coronation, Payette and Silverquick — and on Lodestar Mines and Zulu Explorations which had been suspended earlier.

Under a suspension, the stock can not be sold through an exchange but may be sold privately. The cease-trading order prohibits stock salesmen from selling the shares privately.

Cease-trading orders are reviewed every 15 days.

A spokesman for the exchange said the mass suspension of companies will become an annual event in January as a form of year-end housekeeping.

During December the exchange is busy preparing annual reports and other data and the check on report filing is not as thorough as in other months.

This is corrected in January with a massive clean-up, if needed.

The suspensions will be continued until the missing reports are filed and copies are distributed to shareholders. In most cases the reports are quarterly financial statements.

In other exchange activities, Albany Oil and Gas Ltd. was delisted this week at its own request.

Shares of Alice Arm Mining Ltd. were consolidated 1-for-5 to form New Congress Resources Ltd. (NGR) on the curb exchange. The outstanding 3,600,005 shares become 720,001 shares, including an escrow position reduced from 550,000 to 110,000 shares.

Venture Properties Ltd. has advised the exchange it has purchased all the issued shares of two Hong Kong registered companies, Cenko Enterprises and Chiefsing Enterprises, which hold Hong Kong real estate worth a total of $6.9 million.

The agreement was made by Venture with Hong Kong Barge Ltd. and Kong Fat Company Ltd.

Venture is authorized to issue 65 million shares. There are 5 million outstanding and another 16.7 million will be distributed to the vendors but held in escrow.

Afton Mines has issued 736,548 of its shares to Teck Corporation and 396,603 to Iso Mines Ltd. based on an agreement that the two firms will eventually put the orebody into production.

Coronation Credit Corp. shares have been removed from the trading list at the request of Cornat Industries but preferred shares of Coronation Credit will remain posted for trading.

Distillers Corp-Seagrams Ltd. has changed its trading name to The Seagram Co. Ltd. — Le Compagnie Seagram Ltee and began trading under the new name on Tuesday.

CONDOMINIUM HOMES
DISCERNING

THE WRONG TIME TO BUY?

Remember three years ago (and three years before that)? The market was bad, money was tight and the general economy appeared to be such that nobody wanted to invest in a home?

Well, we survived those two crises (and the ones before them) and here we are facing similar times. Things may be a bit rough now, but are they any worse than we've faced and overcome before? So don't be of faint heart. Already the worm is beginning to turn . . . for the better. The next few months may very well find the sun shining and the storm clouds behind us.

WHAT WILL A CONDOMINIUM HOME COST NEXT YEAR?

While most people are watching and waiting, the discerning are buying . . . at today's prices. Everything will probably increase in cost over the next six months or so including homes. They always have and always will. After all, try and think of a better investment in Victoria than a home. And the increase in the price of that home (the one you bought today) takes care of a lot of interest. So chances are, if you buy today, a year from now you'll pat yourself on the back for being so bright. After all, there are an awful lot of people who are very happy that they bought three years ago in that economy and three years before that. What do you suppose those condominium homes are worth today.

A WORD ABOUT SPENCER CASTLE

Today there's a private community of exquisite condominium homes called Spencer Castle. These are expensively finished and built. Priced from $63,900 to $74,500 they're located high above Victoria's natural beauty on their own four and a half acre estate of landscaped grounds.

The historic castle which was the Spencer home has been retained as the guest house and entertainment centre for the condominium owners . . . only the heated, enclosed swimming pool and saunas has been added to complete the lifestyle.

As befits the price and this never-to-be duplicated location, the craftsmanship and detail in the construction of these new condominiums are extraordinary. The builders, Danzo and Franco have always demanded and achieved the highest quality in their condominiums — a fact borne out by the satisfied owners of suites in the first phase and those owners already enjoying their condominium homes in this second phase.

Phase II of Spencer Castle, like Phase I, is constructed of reinforced concrete and reinforced block and beam. It provides underground parking for each suite and additional parking area. The suites range in size from 1345 and 1430 square feet. They feature two bedrooms, two four piece vanity bathrooms and a full range of appliances — washer, dryer, range with self-cleaning oven, frost free refrigerator, dishwasher, garbage disposal unit. Each condominium home has its own distinctive panoramic view of the city, the mountains, the ocean. The detailing and quality materials from the luxurious carpeting throughout to the extensive use of vinyl wallpaper are worthy of the finest homes in British Columbia.

HIGH INTEREST RATES?

Sure, interest rates are high but with home ownership, you have a non-taxable capital gain when you sell. And what about the appreciation on your condominium home in one or two years as opposed to buying a comparable one at that time?

A lot of people are worrying about a couple of percentage points of interest when they should be considering the increased costs of construction a year or two hence. What will it cost to build this quality condominium home in the future.

What this adds up to is a new condominium home that you should be taking advantage of today. Boil it all down and there's no reason whatsoever to be hesitant about considering Spencer Castle.

MAYBE IT'S NOT THE WRONG TIME TO BUY?

So maybe times aren't as bad as they seem. It might just be a very wise time to buy at Spencer Castle. We don't think you'll find these condominium homes duplicated at these prices anywhere. And remember . . . Spencer Castle Condominiums are in a never-to-be duplicated location — on the highest point of land in the City of Victoria with over four and a half acres of their own grounds. Come and see them — SPENCER CASTLE — CONDOMINIUM HOMES BUILT FOR THE DISCERNING . . . a wise decision . . . now!

Youth Seeks Major Role

By D. T. GRESHAM
P.S. Ross and Partners

When employers express a deep concern over the critical shortage of competent people — potential managers, staff professionals, clerical and technical support staff, and skilled tradesmen — they may actually be:

● Questioning the effectiveness of our educational system and its role in developing the potential of our nation's youth.

● Failing to recognize the strong anti-business attitudes of young people generally.

● Showing a lack of understanding of the changing values of our current generation which appear to clash head on with an organization's goals or objectives.

● Failing to recognize that the time-honoured motivators of people, young and old, no longer work effectively.

MANAGEMENT MEMO

● Lacking an awareness that there is a restlessness within their organizations and our society as a whole.

The educational system itself is struggling with the uncertainties of change, as young people challenge the very core and sanctity of the traditional concepts of education. Our youth are demanding, in no uncertain terms, far greater participation in the selection of curricula, much more emphasis on a personal rights approach to learning, extensive involvement in the previously sacred administrative functions of our learning institutions, and a lessening of emphasis on measurements and standards of educational accomplishment. They are insisting that they not only be listened to, but that they also be heard.

An extensive survey recently completed by a group of consultants revealed that the corporate image in Canada is badly tarnished when mirrored in the framework of campus attitudes; a large majority of respondents to the survey expressed strong negative feelings towards the current Canadian business scene. Extreme disapproval of the free enterprise system and the current economics of business, as voiced by students, should give cause for concern and re-examination of the corporate campus image. The traditional work ethic is dying, and perhaps even dead; ideas that hard work pays off and that work by itself is essential to a person's mental and social health were rejected.

And so, as society's values change, employers' attitudes and their organizations must also change. Most people today can make a good living doing almost anything they may wish to do. Society now provides many choices for people in terms of the quality and direction of their lives — where and how they may wish to live, and when and at what they may wish to work are now viewed as alternatives, not requirements. Workers, young and old, are demanding more opportunity for personal growth and development within their organizations — they want and expect to be challenged in their work; they need outlets for their creative energy and broader knowledge.

They want to be involved in a real sense in an organization's goals and objectives — the traditional structure has lost its appeal. Autocratic and paternalistic leadership now attracts only the insecure, the incompetent, the timid, and retains the contended, the passive and the uninspired.

If employers respond to these new values and desires by developing a management philosophy and an organizational structure to accommodate change, the exciting creative potential of people can move organizations to new found heights of success and profitability. Those companies who have identified the untapped resources and potential of their employees now find competent people developing within their own organizations as a response to visible creative-management philosophies.

But fundamental to adapting a management philosophy and structure that results in a creative environment is an understanding that people must be managed differently. The traditional economic motivators are found to be passive in effect — positive motivation today relates to satisfying needs, desires and goals. People are more content with competence in their work, and do not necessarily seek excellence. They are seldom inspired by demands of their superiors, but most often by the challenges of their own objectives. For the potentially competent worker to be productive, the organization must seek to serve his ends, recognize his values and accommodate his desires. In no way does this creative-management philosophy clash with the realistic goals and objectives of the organization — rather it supports and reinforces.

Managements of corporations, larger and small, must devote time, energy, money, and commitment to attracting critical human resources by publicizing their changing management philosophy and structure and its identification with the new values of society.

In the community at large, business must be recognized as having clear-cut priorities, in terms of people, by:

● Active participation in the campus community, through financial aid, funded social programs, joint corporate-campus advisory groups, public policy committees, and strong recruitment programs.

● Improved communication with the external community through public relations activities, charitable works, support of social community groups, expressed environmental concerns, and an effective total community approach to social issues.

● Positive inter-action with employees, through training and development seminars, progressive personnel policies, specialized educational programs, an organizational philosophy with a recognizable human resource approach, all requiring commitment from the top echelon down.

When business succeeds in building a working society that is identified with having the interests of people at heart, then many of the more serious problems of business today, including the critical scarcity of competent people, will disappear.

Eastern Airlines Shows a Profit

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Eastern Airlines reported a $10.4-million net profit for 1974, rebounding from a $51.3 million loss in 1973, officials said Tuesday.

"We are gratified by the financial turnaround at Eastern," Floyd Hall, chairman of the board, said in a statement, "however, we are far from satisfied with a profit that amounts to less than seven-tenths of one cent per dollar of revenue. . . ."

Eastern reported a net loss of $6.5 million for the quarter ending Dec. 31, 1974, but a $1.4-million profit for the month of December.

Officials attributed the overall 1974 turnaround to higher fares and increased traffic on the lucrative New York-Miami route due to a 108-day strike against National Airlines.

The airline said operating revenues for 1974 were $1.53 billion, an increase of 17.4 per cent over 1973; and operating expenses were $1.46 billion, a 10.4-per-cent increase.

TAX TIPS

Q. May I deduct the value of Olympic Action Stamps which I purchased in 1973?

A. The deductible portion is the amount paid in excess of the actual value of the stamps. This deduction must be supported by a receipt from the Post Office. Please refer to Item 36 of the filing guide provided with your income tax return.

Q. I paid $1,500 in alimony to my former wife last year. Can I claim all of this on my income tax return.

A. There is no dollar limit on the amount of alimony that can be deducted. You claim the full amount paid in the year as long as the payments are made on a periodic basis for the maintenance of your ex-wife and, or children, and are in accordance with a decree, a court order or a written agreement. If you and your wife were reconciled before the end of the year you would not be able to claim alimony, but you could claim instead such personal exemptions as might be allowed.

Q. I have to travel 35 miles to get from my home to my place of employment. There is no bus service. Can I claim travelling expenses when filing my income tax return?

A. No. The expense of travelling to and from work is not deductible. However, you may claim an employment expense deduction of three per cent of your employment income, up to $150 a year.

Q. When the father and mother both work, can either of them claim the child care expenses?

A. No. When both parents work only the mother can claim the child care expenses.

Q. My wife works part time in my small grocery store. Can I claim wages for her in my return?

A. If your business is a sole proprietorship, you cannot claim wages paid to your wife as an expense.

The Landlord's Side of Story

Victoria landlord Ralph Hoitz faces a repair bill of $10-$12,000 if he wants to re-rent his old frame house on Quadra Street.

Hoitz's tenants in the house on Quadra across from the Crystal Pool, ripped out doors, floorboards, door casings and jambs, baseboards, wall lumber and even a turn-of-the-century-style polished mahogany fireplace mantle.

"You hear so many sobbing stories about tenants," said Hoitz. "I just want to show that there is another side to the story."

Hoitz's company, Alster Construction, bought the house six months ago, in the hope that it could get a building permit from the city of Victoria to put up an apartment building.

The house was to be either moved or demolished when the permit came through, but in the meantime it was rented for $250 per month.

On Dec. 1, the previous tenants moved out and Hoitz and his partner decided not to re-rent the house. It was in good shape at that time, Hoitz said, "at least on the inside."

He was approached by a young couple with a small child "who pleaded with me to let them rent it. I didn't want to because we didn't know when or if we'd get the building permit and we didn't want to worry about moving anybody out."

Hoitz said the young couple agreed to move out Jan. 15 so he let them move in.

"After a while I found out that another couple had moved in, but I didn't say anything about that," he said.

On Jan. 14, early in the evening of the day before the tenants were to move out, Hoitz went to the house to collect the unpaid rent.

"When I got there, there was a van outside and the people were loading all this lumber they had ripped out of the house.

"They told me they figured that I was going to destroy it anyway so it didn't matter."

Hoitz said the tenants told him they were under the impression that they were allowed to rip out lumber," but they never asked if they could and I sure never told them it was all right."

He called his lawyer and the police. "But the police say they can't really do anything because it was more a misunderstanding than a theft." His lawyer is still working on it, he said.

The bill to repair the damages will be between $10,000 and $12,000, Hoitz said, and "we just can't do that."

"I tell you, the next time somebody pleads with me because they're out in the cold, I'm not going to liten."

BARRETT APPROVES BIG MERGER

Premier Barrett approves the proposed merger of Block Bros. Industries and City Savings and Trust Co.

"We are completely satisfied with any plans that they wish to make in the financial area relating to trust companies," Barrett announced Tuesday.

The B.C. government stepped in and asked Block Bros. to delay negotiations toward a merger last month to enable the province to assess and clarify the impact of the move.

"We are pleased with the financial responsibility and management of Block Bros. and we have informed them that any decision they wish to make in the trust field is, of course, entirely up to them" said the premier.

Barrett said he did not know if the two companies would go ahead with the merger which would make City Savings' parent, First City Financial Corp., one of the largest financial companies in Western Canada.

ATTENTION!
SAANICH TAXPAYERS

PLEASE CONSIDER THE FOLLOWING:

The hypocrisy of management in their recent advertisements of January 11 and 12 entitled "Fair Play" and paid for with your tax dollars, is apparent when the following rates are studied.

YEARLY C.U.P.E. RATES				YEARLY MANAGEMENT RATES
	1969	1973	RAISE		1969	1973	RAISE
Labourer	$5827	$8438	$2611	Municipal Planner	$15,696	$24,480	$8,784
Gardener	$6689	$9322	$2633	Development Engineer	$11,916	$18,528	$6,612
Mechanic	$6872	$9634	$2762	Municipal Administrator	$21,188	$27,732	$6,544
Loader operator	$7970	$10,182	$2212	Recreation Manager	$11,755	$17,868	$6,113
Accounts Clerk	$5975	$8125	$2150	Personnel Director	$12,603	$19,860	$7,257
Clerk	$3536	$6291	$2755	Parks Administrator	$12,619	$18,292	$5,673
Sewers Superintendent	$10,399	$12,578	$2179	Business Licence Inspector	$9,363	$15,567	$6,204
Tradesman	$6394	$9431	$3037	Assistant Planner	$10,466	$18,396	$7,930
Truck Driver	$7164	$9355	$2191	Mayor	$5,400	$12,415	$7,015

All of the above rates are from a municipal publication entitled "Statement of Payments for the Year".
Wherever possible, we have used the same person in the same position. However, in some cases due to promotion, retirement, etc. this was not possible. The 1974 rates are not available to us at this time but we are sure they will show even greater disparity.
It is interesting to note that the clerk's rate above also includes all applicable increment raises for that period of time. A new employee having started in 1973 would have earned an estimated $5040.
If, according to the regional bargaining group, the workers' increase is to be tied to the cost of living — who is going to tie management? We find it hard to understand why it costs management so much more to live.

Airport Targets?

OTTAWA (CP — Airports might be the first target of a strike by federal labor and trades employees should current conciliation efforts fail, a spokesman for the Public Service Alliance said Tuesday.

The union, which represents the 18,600 workers in the labor and trades group, has started a series of meetings across the country to co-ordinate any possible strike action.

The spokesman said that in the event of a strike, the union would probably pick targets which would feel the greatest impact. Airport runway cleaners are among employees in the group.

Taxpayer's Strike Threat If Civic Raise Tops 12%

An Oak Bay resident has served notice on council he will go on a taxpayer's strike if wage increases granted members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees are more than 12 per cent.

In a letter before council Monday night, D. S. Dove of 2569 Dufferin said:

"It is difficult to see where 12 per cent annual increases will get to or even harder when the figure tried for is even greater, say 15 to 20 per cent, when compounded annually.

"About the only way I can think of to back up my point of view, which is to allow no more than merit increases in pay at this time, is to go on a taxpayers strike.

"I therefore advise that should increases be granted to CUPE employees greater than 12 per cent per annum, (for 1975 only), I will go on strike and will not pay my 1975 taxes until forced by due process of law to do so."

Dove said he hopes "this positive action" will occur to numerous other taxpayers and such a step will "temper your generosity in wage negotiations."

Aldermen received and filed the letter without comment.

Meanwhile, at least one Saanich resident says she is prepared to jump in and help fill the breach if negotiations between municipalities and their employees come to a showdown.

Mrs. June Jarvie of 4020 Carey has written council, saying she and her husband support council's stand against accelerating wage increases and offers her help. "Under direction, I can help with lawn-cutting and weeding and digging and gardening and watering!" she writes. "I also type."

NEW GROUP FOR DAILLY

Another advisory committee has been set up by the government to study the post-secondary needs of Northern Vancouver Island.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly said Tuesday the committee will spend the next few months examining present educational facilities in the region and develop a plan for community college services in the area.

The North Island was one of four regions recommended for a community college by the education department's earlier task force on colleges.

Ruth Barnett of Campbell River will head the 11-member committee.

Oil Exploration Cut 'a Sin'

More restraint on individual spending and greater corporate spending on oil exploration were panaceas offered by Calgary Conservative MP Jack Horner speaking to Victoria Kiwanis Club Tuesday.

At an Empress Hotel luncheon, the Tory for Crowfoot, first elected in 1958, said it was "a sin" for the Canadian government to discourage petroleum exploration through its energy policy at a time when Canada needs to redress what could be a $3.8 billion balance of payments deficit this year.

"Canada was the only nation in the world to discourage exploration," he said.

"Many politicians blame those terrible multi-national oil companies. I guess it's always good for a politician to have a goat to kick . . . but I think it was a sin," Horner said.

"There is no better time than right now . . . to develop the huge amount of oil in those tar sands," he added in reference to the northern Alberta oil sand deposits from which two major oil companies have withdrawn.

Horner also likened the offshore areas of Newfoundland and Mackenzie delta to the North Sea in terms of potential crude oil producers.

"Huge reserves" may be found there if oil exploration is encouraged he said. The major oil companies or multinational firms could hardly be blamed for skepticism when these two areas are under sole jurisdiction of the federal government, the MP said.

Furthermore, the government's support of Arab financing for Canadian housing needs only worsens the offshore debt and controls the destiny of neither this generation nor the next, Horner said.

Ever since the white paper on energy there had been increasing disinclination to develop Canadian petroleum resources, But Canada is at a crossroad, Horner said, and must decide whether to become more socialistic or retain free enterprise.

War on Noise

How Do You Take an Obscene Parrot to Court? Struggle to Stifle Racket Dies With a Giggle

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Greater Victoria's attempt at drafting a uniform anti-noise bylaw for adoption by all area municipalities died in a legal jungle Tuesday. And the mourners merely laughed.

It was a jungle filled not only with booby traps and pitfalls but, metaphorically speaking, with a nightmarish cacophony of sound — including the raucous mouthings of "obscene parrots," 'a vociferous seagul (aided and abetted by a nonagenarian bird lover), carillons endlessly playing classical music, rock-belting groups, barking dogs and crowing cocks.

But there was only one audible sound in the City Hall committee room: the frequent guffaws and giggles of aldermen as they read the execution order written by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers.

Rarely do memoranda from senior city officials indulge in any flights of humor, but on this occasion either de Villiers was in a frivolous mood or his basic script material was just too good to waste on the usual ponderous prose of bureaucracy.

At any rate, he used a combination of wry comment and sarcasm to convince city fathers that a noise bylaw can be a legal minefield — unless drafted with the utmost care — and that such legislation is difficult enough to enact with practical effect in the city, and to amend as necessary, without trying to make it relevant to all its municipal neighbors as well.

Cause of all the laughter was a detailed five-page letter from the city solicitor, commenting section by section on the draft of a proposed bylaw "for the abatement and control of objectionable noises," which the Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee had forwarded to member municipalities.

The draft was based on an existing city bylaw (not of de Villiers' authorship) but that didn't stop him from criticizing both the original and the copy.

As he noted in the preamble to his critique: "My general comment on the existing and the proposed bylaws is that they create rather than remove confusion by specifying a number of specific instances of violations, and that many of the exceptions to the bylaw are obscure and in some cases illogical."

For example, de Villiers cited the draft's section 5: "No person shall harbour or keep any animal or bird which by causing frequent or loud noise disturbs the quiet, peace, rest, enjoyment, comfort or convenience of the neighborhood or of persons at or near the source of such sound or noise.'

This section, the solicitor pointed out, had been copied from the city bylaw but without incorporating the amendment, which limits its application to caged birds.

He went on: "I presume that the section is aimed at barking dogs, crowing cocks and profane parrots. However, soon after the enactment of the city bylaw my department was called upon to prosecute a 93-year-old lady for feeding a seagull on her lawn, because the seagull vociferously expressed its appreciation of the food."

He recommended the section be deleted or — here, presumably, with tongue firmly in cheek — replaced by: "No person shall keep a dog that barks at night, a cock that crows at night or a parrot that uses loud and offensive language."

And in case anyone had not caught the point, he added: "I trust that the implications of this section are clearly understood, particularly as they would apply to rural areas and to pet lovers."

Another weakness in the bylaw, de Villiers said, was to be found in the list of noises that would be exempt from the bylaw's provisions.

For instance, the draft states that it would not apply to "any duly authorized parade or performance by a military or other band."

It was those last three words that had the city's legal advisor worried. They were "extremely wide" in possible interpretation, he said, and would "permit any group of citizens anywhere to form a band and play music."

Then again, another exception would give the freedom of the decibel range to "the use of bells or chimes by churches, and the use of carillons where such carillons have been lawfully erected."

But wait. Shouldn't that phrase be amended to stipulate the "reasonable use" of such bells and carillons?

De Villiers explained the need by recalling that his department has received complaints about bell-ringing churches.

"One church caused its bells to chime every half-hour, and used a sound amplification device." In that situation because electronic equipment was used "we were able to persuade the church that the exemption did not apply."

As for carillons, the draft bylaw's section didn't say by whom they were to be used.

De Villiers added: "There is presently pending a complaint against erection (which was presumably lawful) of a set of carillons in a private neighborhood. The neighbors complained that 'this gentleman is sounding his carillons, sometimes every quarter of an hour.

"Apparently he has a mechanical device for activating the carillons, and he forces his taste of music (which happens to be good!) upon the unwilling ears of his neighbors.

"Should this be exempted from the noise bylaw, and on what grounds of policy? Why should the noisy playing of rock music be prohibited but the noisy playing of classical music be permitted? And why should either type of music be permitted simply because the instrument used is a carillon?"

Sources at City Hall said later no complaints have been received concerning rock-playing carillons.

De Villiers said he assumed the exemption was intended to legalize the carillons at the Provincial Museum, but argued that same result could be achieved by using powers under the Municipal Act to make different regulations or prohibitions for different areas of the municipality.

However, as soon as this is done the regional uniformity of the bylaw goes out of the window," he stated.

$500,000 CBC Offer Accepted

The city of Victoria has written accepting a $500,000 offer from the CBC for a parcel of city-owned land on the west side of Blanshard, city manager Jim Bramley confirmed today.

Bramley said city council has approved the CBC's proposal but the deal won't be concluded until council has formally ratified the matter and the land has been surveyed.

The property, bounded by Blanshard, Hill, Ross Lane and Kings, behind the Victoria Press Ltd. building, is residual land left after completion of the Blanshard urban renewal project some years ago. The city had invited tenders for its commercial development.

No details of CBC plans for the site were available from a Vancouver spokesman for the broadcasting authority, but unconfirmed reports said it will be developed as both a television and radio station — a project costing upwards of $9 million.

Victoria is the only provincial capital lacking a CBC station.

Mayor Peter Pollen said Tuesday the city had received no indication what type of building the CBC would erect, nor when construction would begin. The failure to provide such information was "rather typical" of the CBC's attitude, he said.

Pollen criticized CBC television as "one of the horrors of Canadian broadcasting," with its heavy reliance on American serials and commercials.

Of greater benefit to the city, he said, would be a CBC radio station and a television station with programming similar to Seattle's Channel 9.

But Ald. Malcolm Anderson today took Pollen to task for his criticisms, saying the mayor was entitled to his personal views but he should have made it clear that they were not generally shared by his council colleagues.

"We as a council are happy to see them there," he said. "Nothing is to be gained by gratuitous insults about the CBC — which are really so corny and old hat that the rest of council really aren't interested in such remarks."

Anderson said the price agreed for the property was "slightly below market price," but council felt it was worth it to ensure a good use for the land.

Ask The Times

Q. I would appreciate some information on the laser beam and its use and origin. — J.S.

A. The amplified beam of light was developed in the U.S. after scientists proposed the idea in 1958. Letters in the word stand for Light Amplification by Stimulated Emmission of Radiation. Because the beam is so intense and highly directional, spreading little with distance travelled, it can be used in all of navigation, communications and medicine. In the latter science, the laser beam is sometimes used to burn away diseased body tissue.

Band Leader Dies at 70

Funeral service will be held Friday for Len Acres, well known local dance orchestra leader who died Tuesday at the age of 70.

Acres and his orchestra played for years in the Crystal Gardens, at the Empress Hotel, and for balls and dance parties.

He played at Government House during the regimes of nine lieutenant-governors from Randolph Bruce to George Pearkes.

Born in England, Acres came to Victoria at age 16.

He used to play music at silent movies, then went to work in the music deparment of David Spencer's Store and later took up orchestra work.

Acres also taught piano lessons for many years.

He is survived by his wife Jean, at their home at 2322 Beach Drive.

His brothers Albert and Fred and sisters Lillian Watson and Marge Knight also survive him.

Funeral will be at Sands Memorial Chapel of Chimes Friday at 1 p.m., Rev. Laura Butler officiating.

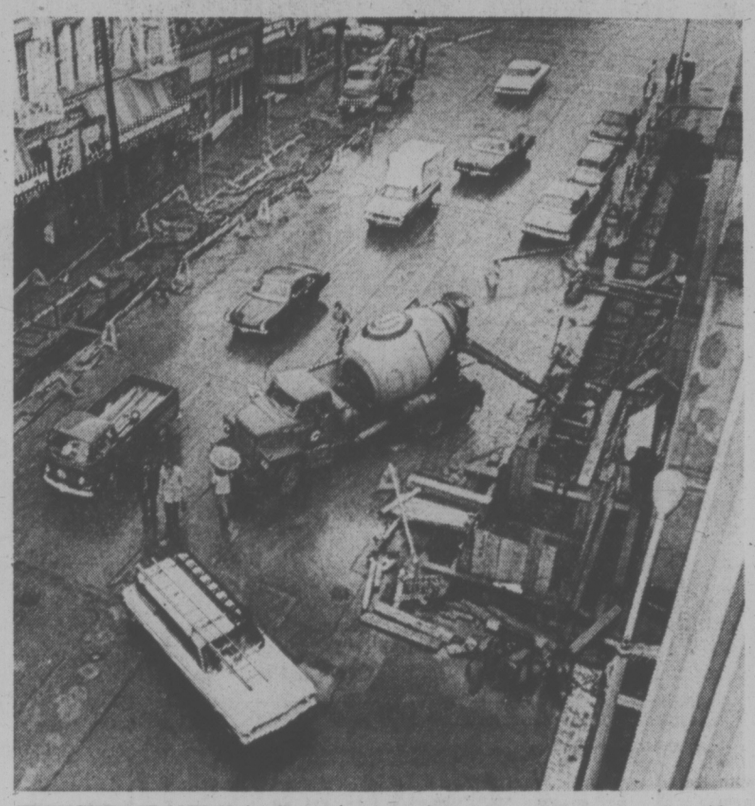
Pulp Carrier Leaves Tonight

The first pulp carrier to tie up at Ogden Point this year leaves at 9 tonight.

She's the Ascona, one of the few ships registered in land-locked Switzerland.

This is the third trip to the west coast for the four-year-old ship. She will load 1,400 tons of pulp before setting out for Europe.

Victoria was a port of call for her twice in 1974.



TRENCHES FLANK Yates Street in the 600-block these days and it's something of a battle getting through. The concrete pours, the pedestrians wander and the motorists fume as B.C. Hydro vaults and conduits go in alongside Post Office and across the street. It's not a new story. Gas service was replaced on north side last year. (John McKay photo.)

PCB Flashes All-Clear On Swan Lake Pollution

Swan Lake has been given a clean bill of health by the B.C. Pollution Control Board.

Tests on the dissolved oxygen content of the lake monitored eight parts per million throughout the lake.

Saanich municipal engineer Cliff Warren said the PCB inspectors told him "the lake has returned to an aerobic state (no more odors)."

Residents and those driving by the lake area have complained for years about the smell of gases generated by the polluted lake.

"Now the people around the area will be able to get rid of their clothespins!" Warren quipped.

Tests taken late in 1974 showed pollution had killed stocks of cutthroat trout and other fish that once inhabited the lake.

Now the pollution problem appears to have been almost licked, the fish and other life could be expected to return to the lake, Warren said.

"Now the gases are no longer existent the lake can support aquatic life," he said.

The only question remaining, Warren added, was the amount of sediment that had settled on the bottom of the lake and its possible effects.

"We will continue to do some bottom sampling," he said, "to see if whether, in the warmer weather, there will be any chemical reaction to cause problems."

Chief culprit in the pollution of the lake has been Saanich municipality.

Much of the pollution dumped in the lake was from the Willow-McBriar treatment plant at the municipal yard.

The plant was phased out in late December when the new sewer extension in the Blenkinsop area was activated.

Aldermen Seek City Branch For Rentalsman

To end the "chaotic" situation involving Victoria-area complaints to the Vancouver office of the B.C. Rentalsman, the city's housing committee recommended Tuesday that Victoria make office space available for a local branch of the provincial agency.

Aldermen were told that Victoria residents seeking information on landlord-tenant matters experience difficulties in contacting the Vancouver office, which has only 20 telephones serving the entire province.

Even when contact is established, said a staff report, the rentalsman's investigator usually has no knowledge of the Victoria situation.

The report said the only processing system at present involves monthly visits by the deputy rentalsman, and the use on a fee-for-service basis of Basil Wallace, former manager of the municipally-funded Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau which was wound up last October.

But Wallace, who has to work out of his own home, is required to handle investigations "from Nanaimo south."

To underline aldermen's complaints of the inadequacy of this system, committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier said in one month alone last year Wallace's LTAB handled 788 calls in the Greater Victoria area.

"Let's notify the provincial government that the current state of the rentalsman's office is chaotic as far as it applies to Victoria," suggested Ald. Mike Young.

The offer of office space arose after the committee heard that Rentalsman Barrie Clark has an inadequate budget to afford such an establishment in the city.

CONTRACT AWARDED ON MALL

Extra cost risks notwithstanding, Victoria city council agreed Tuesday to award the contract for construction of the Government Street Mall so that work can start as planned later this month.

Earlier Tuesday, the Central Area development committee had talked of a likely delay for the project, due to the possibility that a threatened strike by municipal employees could result in the mall work being picketed and held up for three or four months.

The matter was discussed again at an in-camera meeting of council's caucus, and a source said today it was decided to give the go-ahead "because if we didn't bite the bullet now we just wouldn't proceed."

The $566,056 contract was awarded to the low bidder, Capital City Construction Ltd.

Win a Prize—For 'Coming Back to Life'

So life's feeling a bit flat and meaningless lately, eh?

Well, here's a remedy. Go surfing. Borrow a homemade hollow surfboard with a hole in it and tackle the winter waves at Jordan River. Get swept out to sea and, when the board fills with water and sinks, grab a log and then another log, lash them together with kelp and cling to them all night and more. And then, 19 hours after it all began, or thereabouts, after drifing some 20 miles, be found still alive, floating on a bed of seaweed.

Sound a bit extreme to you? Then let life stay flat and meaningless.

But, although it was quite unintentional, that's what Victoria's Jim Hilborn did — and he can recommend it.

A 17-year-old high school student now back at Mount Douglas after a year attending Shawnigan Lake Boys' School, Jim went missing Sunday, Dec. 29, while surfing with friends and was plucked from the icy water late the following day after an extensive air-sea search.

"It's good for people to have this sort of thing happen to them occasionally," says Jim and he adds rather poetically: "Then they get prizes for coming back to life."

And Jim's prizes?

"Well, the whole thing has made me appreciate things more, luxuries, people," he says. "When the board wouldn't support me any more and I could see the storm coming, I could see myself at my own funeral. I could see people I knew there, too."

★

"I could see that for about half an hour," Jim went on. "That was a long half hour, I can tell you. I guess that's the half hour I learned most about life and about myself.

"I realized suddenly that I had been taking a lot of things for granted and I kept telling myself, if I pull out of this I would appreciate life more and not take everything for granted." Then a smile spreads across Jim's face and he adds: "Although, I guess I will be the same as I always was."

"While I was out there clinging to that log, I learned a lot of things about people and about myself," Jim says seriously. "Like I wasn't afraid of dying, because I wasn't panicking. My first thought was about my mother, because she had a stroke about three years ago and I thought if I died . . . then it would finish her off."

Jim Hilborn lives in a beautiful home with sweeping views over Cedar Hill golf course. Next year he plans to return to Shawnigan Lake School and later go on to university to try for a degree in business administration. And one day he will take over the family business, Oakland Industries, a fish-packing firm of which his father Bill Hilborn is president.

Apart from that, though, Jim is your average teenager. He lounges in a chair and gazes out of the window but seems to be staring into space; he wears a bulky sweater and torn blue jeans and his face has its share of pimples; and Elton John, singing of what "the papers have got to say about teenage blues," has to be toned down a little so we can talk.

And like most young people, to Jim danger and a brush with death are not too serious. In fact, he admits he has been laughing most of the time about the fuss people have made.

A cold water survival expert said at the time Jim's ordeal would have killed most people. But he shrugs and says he thinks most people could do it if they had to.

The whole adventure didn't even have a serious beginning.

★

"We were just sitting around here with nothing to do and one of the guys had seen a picture in the Times of someone surfing at Jordan River," Jim explains. "So we said let's try it. And we did."

Jim's a qualified scuba diver (he learned at Shawnigan Lake School) and he skis but he had never been surfing before.

"I haven't been yet either," he laughs, "for I never did get up. It's harder than it looks."

And he laughs about the serious reaction of others.

"Like, the Vancouver Sun phoned me and wanted to come and take a picture of me surfing," says Jim. "And I told them sorry, but I can't surf and they were pretty disappointed. I guess they could see a bit of money floating away."

Jim's attitude didn't stop him from accepting a trip to Toronto to be interviewed for the quiz show "Front Page Challenge" though. (He is expected to appear on Tuesday, Jan. 28, at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 2).

"I'd been laughing all the way through about people making a big deal out of this, but I wasn't going to say no," he smiled. "And my bill for just two nights at the Hyatt Regency came to $125."

Jim has been flooded with fan mail and he has all the letters and cards stuck neatly into a scrap book.

There's a nice letter from H. C. Wilkinson, headmaster at Shawnigan Lake School, praising Jim's courage.

There's another from a man in Cassiar, B.C., likening Jim to himself and saying that he, too, had "got out of several situations mostly intact, sometimes with holes in my skin." He urged Jim to take care.

"And there's this one from a Jesus Freak urging me to thank God and accept Christ as my saviour," says Jim, holding the letter out.

But the best is from a girl in Saskatchewan, who says she wrote it 20 minutes before midnight on New Year's Eve and signed her name with the prefix "your unknown friend" although she obviously doesn't want to stay that way.

"You're cute," she tells Jim after having seen his picture in a Saskatoon paper.

She described herself as "five feet, eight inches, long light-brown hair, hazel green eyes, not fat, not skinny" and said she would like to get to know Jim better.

"I'm going to answer that one," he says with a grin.

"Well, I mean, why not? You never know when I might be in Saskatchewan!"

A Fable: Thinking to Get The Gold . . . He Killed It

Around 600 B.C., which works out to about 25 centuries ago, a Greek slave named Aesop successfully used animal stories to illustrate human virtues and frailties. Besides, he was very witty, and eventually earned his freedom.

And he concluded one of his fables with the sentence which pretty well describes the entire professional sports picture in North America at the moment: " . . . Thinking to get at once all the gold the goose could give, he killed it and opened it, only to find nothing."

If Aesop didn't make up all his famous tales — the lion and the mouse, the tortoise and the hare, the grasshopper and the ant, and the goose that laid the golden egg, as a skilful storyteller he is generally given for them, or at least for making them popular.

President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League, obviously a learned man, became the latest admirer of the skillful Greek storyteller Monday when he proclaimed regarding planned future league expansion: "I'm certain at the present time we are not visibly engaged in seeking out other places to play . . . the economics of operations are not the same as they were in 1967, in 1970, or in 1972," which were other expansion years.

In other, more meaningful words, the slowdown has not only been ordered; it is in effect and a halt has been called to the salary spiral as well.

'Putting Out' Starts to Hurt

"I can tell you our salaries are 250 percent what they were in 1971-72, the year before the WHA started."

Then he added, in regard to what everyone else has been thinking — that even the NHL, in many cases, in attempting to keep ahead of the Joneses, in this case the World Hockey Association, may be pricing itself out of business:

"You can ride out a storm by putting out more money, but it gets tiring after a time."

So the war is over, and now it's straight economic fact.

The NHL, it will be recalled, will expand to Denver and Seattle in 1976, perhaps sooner, but now, according to Campbell, "general economic conditions inhibit any further programming beyond that at this time."

As for the WHA, it was hinted a while ago by Campbell that it might fold, but what he meant, he now says, is that the WHA has to be as concerned about ballooning salaries as is the NHL, and in that regard it doesn't seem possible that the WHA can hang on in any prolonged salary battle.

So what's the difference?

It should be patently obvious that some, if not most of the WHA teams, must be on or very near the rocks of financial disaster. The Michigan Stags already have foundered, the Chicago Cougars have obtained new financing; and, generally speaking, none of the crowd totals around the league are that fancy.

Comparison Proves the Point

If the Vancouver Canucks of the NHL, for instance, playing to capacity houses in every home game, can hardly make a buck or two, how, in comparison, can the cross-rink Blazers, who only draw half as many fans on the average, expect to survive in a similar economic situation?

In other sports, the pinch is on as well. The pro golf purse has been cut back (even if it doesn't seem to be bothering Johnny Miller); both the NBA and the ABA are trimming back heavily-inflated salary lists; the World Football League was the sports economic disaster of 1974 with losses estimated at $22 million and franchise after franchise going belly-up. That was no better illustrated than in the case of the Florida Blazers, who proudly displayed a $1.5-million cheque as a bond of stability, only to have the cheque bounce a few days later.

Sure, the old established National Football League was better off, but not much. A pre-season player's strike and declining ticket sales hurt many clubs and it showed up in many stadiums where patrons were disguised as empty seats.

If attendance is still holding firm in the NHL, it is nonetheless down almost everywhere else in pro sport. So the downtrend is on and can't be ignored.

And neither can Aesop's legendary goose.

For if she is not yet stone dead in the public arena, she's ailing with a dandy case of the yips. And if some pro athletes don't necessarily believe in fables, an egg they should know.

Particularly the source.

Ginnell-Harding Spat Heats Up

Referees aren't supposed to be popular with hockey coaches.

But Victoria Cougar coach Pat Ginnell rates Murray Harding of Winnipeg right on top .... of his hate list.

Ginnell harshly criticized Harding's officiating Tuesday as Brandon Wheat Kings trounced Victoria 9-2. It was the worst beating handed the Western Division leaders in this Western Canada Hockey League season.

Ginnell, ejected from the Brandon game late in the second period, vows it will be the last time Harding officiates a game involving the Cougars.

"I'm going to phone (league president) Ed Chynoweth and tell him that under no circumstances will my team play another game handled by Harding," Ginnell said after the game.

Brandon manager Doug Clark, however, was quick to suggest that "the Cougars deserved all the penalties they got."

And there were some penalties.

The Cougars were assessed 13 minors, nine majors, five game misconducts and a match penalty to Eric Sanderson for allegedly throwing a helmet at Brandon defenceman Rick Piche.

Brandon took three minors, nine majors and three game misconducts.

In all, 212 minutes.

It marks the second time this season that Harding has been the controversial centrepiece in a game involving Cougars. He was the official in charge on Oct. 17 when Ginnell pulled the Cougars off the ice in Medicine Hat with the Tigers leading 4-3.

Ginnell was ejected Tuesday after he tossed several sticks on the ice late in the second period. Victoria players then forcibly restrained Ginnell from going after Harding.

Ginnell took particular objection to what he felt was a one-sided assessment of minor penalties.

The Cougars played two men short on four occasions. Brandon made the most of the two-man edge to score three goals and also added two other power-play goals to snap a nine-game unbeaten run by Victoria.

Ginnell also was incensed that Harding tagged Victoria players with additional minors after four separate fights.

Two goals within 18 seconds in the first period enabled Brandon to jump off to a 2-0 lead. Even after Gerald Stoughton made it 3-0 at the 12:06 mark in the second, the Cougars still were in the game.

But they weren't after the penalty parade began a few minutes later.

The loss, combined with Medicine Hat's 11-1 romp over the Clubs in Winnipeg, combined to slice Victoria's lead to 11 points.

Greg Vaydik led the Tigers' assault with two goals and five assists. Don Murdoch scored his 51st goal but managed only one assist to remain 13 points behind scoring leader Mel Bridgman of Victoria.

Old Man Howe Had Fun

EDMONTON (CP) — Gordie Howe told everybody the third annual World Hockey Association all-star game would be the last of his distinguished career—then he went out to enjoy it.

Scoring a goal and an assist to spark the West to a 6-4 victory, the first western triumph after two defeats, Howe won a standing ovation from a capacity crowd of 15,326 at the Edmonton Coliseum and accepted his teammates tributes after it was over.

Howe's goal, one of four in a second-period blitz that gave the West an insurmountable 6-2 margin, came on a half-speed backhander that trickled over the line.

"I was trying to pass into the goalmouth," said Howe. "I knew it was in when Andy Brown (Eastern goaltender) called me a lucky bleep."

The goal gave Howe a bit of an extra kick because he played with Andy's father, forward Adam Brown, early in his pro coreer.

Howe made it clear his last all-star game was something special. He took his stick home.

"Sure, it was fun," he said. "It's nice to wind up with one for the road, but the real highlight was to have the kid score one."

Mark Howe took a flip pass from his father to open scoring in the first period. Forward Mark and defenceman Marty, team-mates with Houston Aeros, gave their father the incentive to come back after a one-year layoff at the age of 44.

Andre Hinse, also of Houston, had two goals for the West. Bobby Hull of Winnipeg and Ted Taylor of Houston had the others.

SORRY, BUT it's no goal despite appearance that puck is heading into net. Bernie Parent (1), tending goal for Campbell Division squad in Tuesday's National Hockey League all-star game at Montreal, was able to deflect this scoring try wide of mark. Other players involved in goalmouth action are Denis Potvin (5), Phil Esposito (7) and Darryl Sittler. White-clad Prince of Wales players had greater success on other occasions to emerge with 7-1 victory. (CP Wirephoto)

Like Father, Like Son . . .

MONTREAL (CP)—The name Syl Apps is in the National Hockey League's all-star record book again.

Apps, a centre with Pittsburgh Penguins, won an automobile after he was selected most valuable player in Tuesday night's annual all-star game as his two-goal performance helped the Prince of Wales Conference to a 7-1 rout of the Clarence Campbell Conference.

Apps' performance came in his first all-star appearance and 28 years after his famous father, then a centre with Toronto Maple Leafs, had scored a goal and assisted on another as his club dropped a 4-3 decision to the NHL All-Stars.

And Syl of Toronto fame was on hand to see his son win the accolades.

"I've never had a bigger thrill—I'm so proud of my son and so happy I was here to see it," the elder Apps said as he stood at the dressing room door.

"I've had lots of thrills in hockey, but this is one of the greatest."

But it was as great a thrill for the son, because he was not one of the 12 members of the Prince of Wales crew voted to the team.

The younger Apps was among several players added to the original 12 by coach Bep Guidolin. So were right winger Terry O'Reilly of Boston Bruins—a late substitute for team-mate John Bucyk—Don Luce of Buffalo Sabres and Darryl Sittler of Toronto.

That trio responded in similar fashion to Apps—they all scored goals in their initial all-star appearances.

A pair of old hands, defenceman Bobby Orr and centre Phil Esposito of the Bruins, added the other goals for the winners. It was Orr's first goal in seven all-star appearances and Esposito's second in the same number of games.

Defenceman Denis Potvin of New York Islanders was the lone scorer for the losers.

Each member of the winning side received $500, with $250 each going to the losers.

The winners led 3-1 after one period on goals by Apps, Luce and Sittler. Potvin scored shortly before the period ended, his second goal in two consecutive all-star appearances.

Esposito netted the only goal of the second period, with Apps adding his second in the third, along with O'Reilly and Orr. Orr's final goal was the only power-play goal of the game.

In addition to a stellar offensive performance, the Prince of Wales winners received top goaltending performances from Rogatien Vachon of Los Angeles Kings and Ken Dryden of Montreal Canadiens. Vachon was the victim of Potvin's goal.

The Vachon-Dryden combination turned back 28 of 29 shots. A record crowd of 16,997—11 more fans than the previous high set in New York's Madison Square Garden in 1973—watched the game.

Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Flyers and Gary Smith of Vancouver Canucks shared goaltending duties for the losers. Parent allowed three goals on the 20 shots he faced while Smith gave up the last four. The pair faced a total of 37 shots.

First Period

1. Prince of Wales, Apps (Johnston, Vadnais) 9:38.

Seattle, Denver Next

MONTREAL (CP) — Denver and Seattle, scheduled to join the National Hockey League in the 1976-77 season, may enter the league earlier through the purchase of existing franchises, it was announced Tuesday.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said following a two-day meeting of the league's board of governors Tuesday, that the entry of the two cities could come about if one or both purchased existing franchises.

He said a meeting of the governors will be held in New York Feb. 1 for further investigation of the subject.

"Both cities have buildings available now," Campbell said. "And I wouldn't be surprised to see them in the league next season."

Campbell said the league could stay at 18 teams if Denver, which has already expressed an interest in purchase of the league-owned California Golden Seals, made such a move.

The league president would not designate a club that Seattle could buy, but it was learned that the Pittsburgh Penguins franchise, which already has received financial assistance from the league, could be the club involved.

The NHL bought back the Seals franchise from owner Charles O. Finley last season after refusing the latter permission to move the team out of the San Francisco - Oakland area.

"What we would like to do is keep the thing in balance," Campbell said, noting that it would be unfair for one of the newcomers to start off with an already constructed team while the other would be forced to start from scratch with players picked up in an expansion draft.

"Seattle and Denver could fulfill their aspirations by the purchase of existing franchises," he said. "But the problem has not been resolved."

After the entry of Seattle and Denver, the NHL was set for further expansion in 1978 and 1980 to bring the total number of teams to 24.

By the two newcomers purchasing existing franchises the league could stay at 18.

"Unless there is some drastic change, we have to be very careful about expanding under the adverse economic situation of today," Campbell added. "We have to work toward a solution of the problem as soon as possible."

Oak Bay Grads On Games Team

Grant Boland and Dave Kirzinger, two Victorians attending Simon Fraser University, have been named to the 10-player B.C. team which will compete for the men's basketball title at the Canada Winter Games in Lethbridge, Feb. 12-23.

Both are graduates of Oak Bay High.

Lorne Dakin of Terrace, who is playing with University of Victoria Vikings, is also included on the SFU-dominated squad.

Other Simon Fraser players picked by provincial coach John Olsen were Don Chapman, Mike Ferguson, Steve Ferguson, Dean Barkley, Peter Shaughnessy and John Gordon.

Bill Berzins of University of British Columbia Thunderbirds was the only other non-SFU player selected.

At the same time, selection of three Victoria players to the provincial women's team has been confirmed. Edna Ritchie and Marg Mainwaring, both of the UVic Viketles, and Angie Dobie of Saanich Westerners were named to the Games' team.

Rounding out the women's team are Vancouver-area players Bev Barnes, Bev Bland, Wendy Grant, Terri McGovern, Joanne Sargent, Dawn Storey, Carol Turney and Eileen Galuska.

BEST PART OF THE GAME . . .

MONTREAL—The 16,977 fans at Montreal Forum and a national television audience missed them, but some of the best moves at the National Hockey League's all-star game were made in the dressing room.

Hockey's he-men scurried for cover and darted for towels when two women reporters invaded the dressing rooms after the game.

"I hate to say it," said defenceman Terry Harper of Los Angeles Kings, "but it was the most exciting thing that happened all night."

The on-ice play was a yawner, but Robin Herman of the New York Times and Marcel St. Cyr of radio CKLN in Montreal made the night far more interesting when they made their appearances in the dressing rooms.

Charges of sex discrimination sprang up Tuesday in two formerly all-male sports.

Jacqueline Garrett of New York lost round one in her attempt to get a licence to box in New York State but was told by her attorney that round two will be fought in State Supreme Court on Feb. 4.

Ms. Garrett, who boxes as Jackie Tonawanda, was informed in a letter from the New York State Athletic Commission that the denial was based on a commission rule which states "no woman may be licensed as a boxer or second or licensed to compete in any wrestling with men."

Edwin B. Dooley, chairman of the commission, said the board feels the rule means that "no woman may box — period."

"Personally, if women want to box, I think they should be allowed to," he added. "I think eventually the regulation will be changed, but the commission only has the power to enforce it."

And in Olympia, Wash., Delores Darrin, a 210-pound school girl and her 170-pound sister, Carol, have carried their protest over being barred from playing varsity football to the State Supreme Court.

The girls, who outweigh most of their male teammates, tried out for Wishkah High School squad in the fall of 1973, passed the physical examinations, participated in all practices and made the starting lineup. But they were disqualified two days before the first game by the Washington Interscholastic Activities Association.

Among the teams mentioned in the report were Houston Oilers, St. Louis Cardinals, San Diego Chargers, Detroit Lions, Kansas City Chiefs, Cincinnati Bengals and the Redskins.

Nahmint Resource Study Sets Pattern for Future

It boggles the mind.

Merely collecting the required data for the Nahmint integrated resource study currently underway on the west coast of Vancouver Island is a task of monumental proportions.

But now, only one year after the actual field work began, that data is in the process of being hammered into a cohesive plan which could serve as a blueprint for other south coastal logging operations.

I've been a firm advocate of applying integrated management techniques to timber harvesting for many years now and it is gratifying to see things finally start to jell. Integrated resource management means taking all factors — recreation, fish, wildlife, soil, topography, etc. — into account when laying out a logging plan.

This system has been used with great success in the Prince George forest district for several years but the Nahmint study is the first venture in this direction on the coast.

The expertise being focused on the Nahmint Valley is impressive.

★ ★ ★

In addition to participation by the principal timber company in the area, MacMillan Bloedel, the study involves input from various divisions within the provincial water investigations branch, environment and land use committee secretariat, fish and wildife branch, parks branch, department of agriculture, forest service as well as federal fisheries.

Quarterly reports keep all agencies aware of what progress has been made and co-ordination is carried out by Brian Nyberg of the Vancouver forest district and J. W. Cowlard of Mac and Blo.

"The Nahmint integrated resource study is now in the stage of final data gathering and data compilation, with the exception of the long-term monitoring of hydrological and climatological trends which will continue through next April," states the latest report.

"Maps for plotting inventory data have now been distributed to the participating agencies by the company. Further progress of the study is dependent on the speed with which maps and reports are prepared and circulated, with the overall constraint set by the necessity of obtaining virtually a full year's data on the climatic and hydrologic cycles of the watershed."

Computer analysis of the data will be carried out at the University of British Columbia and submissions from various outdoor groups on the Island will also be taken into consideration.

★ ★ ★

Among the specific studies carried out during the past year were discharge measurements at the outlet and inlet of Nahmint Lake, sampling of estuary and delta vegetation, surveys of key wildlife areas and populations, sampling of fish populations of the lake and much of the river above the lake, surveys of current and future recreational use and ecological mapping.

Some of the studies overlap and MacMillan Bloedel's engineering and forest inventory crews have been busy gathering supplementary data in a number of areas.

Forestry cost allowances solved the problem of how to compensate the company for those extra dollars spent while gathering material on resources other than timber.

Mac and Blo has prepared a road plan for the watershed and possible bridge locations were examined in the field late last fall by representatives of the company, fed fisheries, fish and wildlife branch, ELUC Secretariat, MacMillan Bloedel and forest service to gather site-specific information for use during upcoming planning sessions.

Nyberg said Tuesday the study group hopes to have an approved cutting plan ready by June 30.

And scientific studies aside, this experiment is useful in another way.

It will establish an important system of co-operation and communications which can be applied to other areas on the Island in relatively shorter time.

Scottish Curlers Coming

An international trophy is at stake, but the results of curling games Thursday won't produce joyous outcry or weeping and wailing.

Social niceties will override the importance of winning when a team of 25 Scottish curlers continues a tour of Canada with matches at the Victoria Curling Club and the Racquet Club.

It's the second stop on a 15-city tour of Canada for the Scots. At stake is the Strathchona Cup. Originally put up

The Scots will play a five-game exhibiton series at Victoria Club at 2 p.m. and cup points will be played for at the Racquet Club.

Mitchell Not Enough

Gord Mitchell's great performance gave Saanich a touch of respectability but it wasn't enough to give the Braves a victory Tuesday.

The Saanich goaltender stole the show but the front-running Esquimalt Buccaneers won the Lower Island Junior "B" Hockey League game 3-2 at Pearkes Arena.

Mitchell made 42 saves, including 18 in the second period, for the cellar-dwellers.

John Entzminger scored two goals and Kerry Brewster added the other for Bucs while Ken McLaren and Lorne Rosenburge connected for the Braves.

Victory protected Esquimalt's five-point advantage over Victoria Nixons, who kept pace by defeating Juan de Fuca Gulls 8-3 at Memorial Arena.

Steve Leatham sparked Nixons with three goals. Larry Donaldon added two and singles went to Norm Allen, Rob Wilson and Tom Dohan.

Barry McLachlan, with two, and Ian McLean scored for Juan de Fuca.

Demons Press to First Victory

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH
Times Staff

Dunsmuir Demons' coach Jim Kilpatrick probably thought sometime Tuesday night that his basketball team would never win a game this season.

The situation at the Claremont gym looked hopeless. His Demons trailed the winless Spartans 20-4 after the first quarter and seemed assured of losing their fifth game in as many outings in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League.

Then Kilpatrick had a brainstorm. Midway through the second quarter he instructed his charges to employ a full court press against the taller Spartans.

The plan worked as the Demons stalled the Claremont attack, cut the margin to 28-18 at the half, then rallied in the second half for an exciting 66-63 triumph.

Catalysts for the undermanned Demons they had just six players dressed were guard Dave Bailyes and rugged centre Royal Edmondson, who was a tower of strength beneath the boards.

The Demons' best ball-handler, Bailyes failed to score in the first half but found the range in the second with 15 points, most on long outside shots.

Edmondson, though, was the sparkplug of the Demons' offence in the second half. Of his game high 27 points, 20 came in the final half and 14 of those in the fourth quarter.

Ken Berry topped the Spartans with 21 points and Grant Westmorland added 10.

In other league play Tuesday, Esquimalt Dockers upset visiting Belmont Braves 45-38, and the undefeated Oak Bay Bays won their fifth straight with an 85-57 decision over host Spectrum.

Belmont Girls Alone on Top

Sheila Chalmers pumped in 16 points Tuesday night to lead Belmont Tomahawks to a 48-27 decision over host Esquimalt Docketts and into sole possession of first place in Division "A" of the Greater Victoria High School Girls' Basketball League.

In other games, Claremont tripped visiting Dunsmuir Demons 45-43 and Oak bay defeated host Spectrum 40-32.

Debbie Lane set the pace for Docketts with eight points. Stephanie Mudie topped Spectrum with 14 points, two more than team-mate Janet Justice. Donna Derry led Bays with 14 points.

Jeanine Wright led Claremont with 16 points and Cheryl Archer emerged as high scorer for Dunsmuir with 19.

SCHOOL SPORTS
jim crerar

When the McKinnon Building opened on the UVic campus, officials expected there would be a surge of interest in intramural and recreational activities among the students.

What they got was a tidal wave.

Mind-boggling was the term athletic director Mike Elcock used to describe the response to programs that began Monday in UVic's new $2.4 million sports and recreaton complex.

"Because it was brand new, it was a little hard to tell just what response was going to be," added Penny Lough, coordinator of intramural and recreational activities.

Penny, a UVic grad who taught two years at Highrock Junior Secondary, came back to campus last November to help Elcock map out the program.

A lot of her efforts were directed at drawing up a recreational instruction program involving 16 activities. By Monday, all but one — golf — were booked solid, extra classes had to be added and there were waiting lists. Courses run from four to 10 weeks.

Most popular is social dance, an intramural version of Arthur Murray in which students learn the intricacies of ballroom waltzing, foxtrot, tango, cha-cha, rhumba, samba and jive. It's also an opportunity for the old boy-meets-girl routine, which possibly explains why 120 are taking the course from instructor Glynis Barber. There are 15 more on the waiting list.

Sixty have signed up for Gordon Limbrick's course in yoga and 48 are taking squash from Racquet Club pro Ray Aldegaur. About 40 per cent of them are women.

Peter Kopac's recreational gymnastics course has attracted 30, as has Valerie Lewis's jazz fitness program. Valerie also instructs creative dance, which has attracted 15.

Other courses, with instructors and enrolment bracketed, are survival swimming (Peter Chapman 15); skin diving (Doug Hartley, 15); beginners' swim (Aileen Hay, 15); judo (Peter Lam, 30); women's self defence (Tom Jarvis, Peter Lam, 50); karate (Tom Jarvis, 30); swim stroke improvement (Aileen Hay, 30); women's keep fit (Valerie Lewis, 30); springboard diving (John Edwards, 15).

Nearly 550 students are taking the courses, shutting out faculty and staff from all but golf, where Uplands pro Don Billsborough still has some openings.

Intramural competition also began Monday in four sports — basketball, co-ed volleyball, co-ed inner tube water polo and men's floor hockey.

"I'd have been happy with eight to 10 teams in each sport," Elcock said. Instead he got 29 basketball teams — including seven women's squads — embracing 375 players; 265 volleyball players on 22 teams; 312 inner-tube water polo players on 26 teams and 285 floor hockey players on 22 teams. It adds up to more than 1,200 players on 99 teams.

Adding those who drop in for casual games of squash, volleyball, basketball or just a swim, Elcock estimates about 40 per cent of UVic's 5,600 students are using the new facilities. That figure is considerably above the average for other Canadian universities.

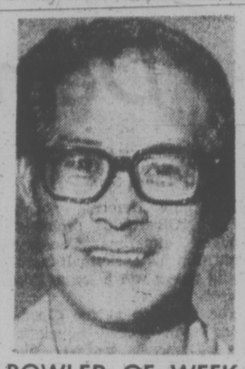
CHALK DUST — John Kootnekoff, whose Simon Fraser University Clansmen made their final basketball appearance Tuesday night at UVic, is resigning as coach. Word is he hopes to teach psychology . . . UVic Vikings have made the Canadian intercollegiate top 10 weekly rankings for the first time this week. The Canada West men's leaders are ranked 10th. Only other western school ranked is Manitoba of the Great Plains conference. The Bisons are third behind top-rated Waterloo Warriors and the second-place St. Mary's Huskies . . . Alberta Golden Bears are staging a runaway in Canada West hockey, which included UVic until the school dropped out of the league two seasons ago. The Bears and Saskatchewan Huskies were involved in a wild brawl recently. Eight players were thrown out, as Alberta won, 6-3.



BOWLER OF WEEK

Earning chance to win Bowler-of-the-Year crown for second time is Henry Loo, winner of men's tenpin honors in 14th week of Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Winner of tenpin rolloff title in 1964, Henry rolled 206-234-215—655 series in Friday Niters' League at Mayfair Lanes.

First for Vikings

University of Victoria Vikings likely won't get another chance to savor a victory over Simon Fraser University Clansmen after beating the mainland school 69-60 in an exhibition men's basketball game Tuesday night at UVic.

It marked the last meeting between the two teams and the first time Vikings have ever managed to collect a win.

The Canada West University Athletic Association, which included UVic, has discouraged competition against SFU because of the school's approach to athletics. It is one of the few universities in Canada giving athletic scholarships.

Jim Duddridge led the Viking attack with 29 points and Doug Mosher added 10.

The UVic crew jumped to an early 19-point lead but Clansmen took advantage of four Viking turnovers to cut the margin to 36-28 at the intermission. Bert Zethoff was a standout on defence for Vikings.

Don Chapman led SFU with 16 points and Rob Stewart added 14.

VIKINGS 69 — Jim Duddridge 29, Pard Hogweide 2, Bert Zethoff 4, Lee Edmonson 9, Evan Jones, Dave Mulcahy 3, Lorne Dakin 4, Rob Parris 8, Dale McDonald, Leon Mitchell, Dave Speed, Doug Mosher 10.

SIMON FRASER (60) — Don Chapman 16, John Gordon 3, Grant Boland 1, Warner Span, Dave Kirzinger 7, Rob Stewart 14, Stu Graham 7, Larry Shreet 4, Kelly

FINLEY PAYS UP

NEW YORK (AP) — Owner Charles Finley of baseball's Oakland A's has paid Jim (Catfish) Hunter the disputed $50,000 that led to the pitcher being declared a free agent, The New York Daily News reported in today's edition.

The News said Finley paid up on Monday — $50,000 plus six per cent interest.

Volleyball Surprise

They may not see front-line duty Saturday but Karen Egger and Ann Fowler are glad just to be with the Canadian national volleyball team.

The two Victoria natives aren't expected to be on the Canadian starting six for the team's date Saturday at UVic with a top Korean club squad, but they will be in uniform.

Making the Canadian national team, though, will be more than ample consolation for the duo, both of whom have had to work intensely to make the squad.

For Miss Egger, one year out of Esquimalt High School, being with the team is also something of a surprise. When she was asked by national coach Moo Park in September to join the nationals' training site at University of British Columbia, the offer was no guarantee of making the club.

But in December national member Carol Bishop was injured, leaving a facancy on the team which was to leave at the end of the month for exhibition games in Cuba. Overlooking more experienced players, Park offered Karen the available berth.

Karen's volleyball potential is enormous, according to B.C. provincial coach Vic Lindal.

"A Japanese volleyball authority, Shimazu, worked out a volleyball index that rates potential. The highest I saw for Japan, China and in North America was 106. Karen rated 109," said Lindal Tuesday.

Ann, said Lindal, isn't blessed with Miss Egger's great potential, but she makes up for it with her tremendous determination.

"Ann is the hardest working athlete I've ever seen. When I was coaching the team in Vancouver, Ann would come over from Victoria for our practices every Sunday," said Lindal.

The match Saturday will be a best-of-five series between the two evenly matched teams on their western Canada tour. Preceeding the 1:30 p.m. match will be preliminary between two of Victoria's top elementary school teams, Richmond and Doncaster. Tuesday, the Canadians beat the South Koreans 12-15, 16-14, 9-15, 15-13, 15-1 to take a 3-2 lead in their series.

BRIDLE BITS

By PHIL MERRICK

It just seems that when a group of human beings become involved over a common interest they, individually and collectively, acquire odd traits. Often when describing someone the description will finish with a remark similar to "He (she) is a little different." "He (she) curls," or "He (she) belongs to the Dog Club" or perhaps "He (she) golfs." The idea the speaker wants to imply is that because of a hobby or interest the person is not quite normal. If the foregoing has the slightest truth it is more true when applied to horse people.

Most horse people will agree that to own a horse one should be somewhat short of mental discernment. Few ever recover from the disability. Very few horse owners will fail, upon examination, to be free of the malady "stable blindness." This sickness has nothing to do with the eyesight of the animals or their owners. It is a mental condition and the symptoms are varied but always revolve around the description of the victim's horses. Basically the problem is that the horse owner is not able — or willing — to admit to the shortcomings of his animals. He cannot or will not see what others observe. This malady is present in both newcomers and oldsters in the horse community.

Typical examples can be seen at a horse show where even to the uninitiated there will be horses entered in a class where they do not belong because they do not comply with the class conditions. In the owner's mind the animal is entered correctly but his sight and judgment is blinded because it is his horse. Most of these people readily see faults in other people's horses.

So that we may enjoy horses to the fullest extent lets accept them as they are. If they lack quality, glory in their substance. If they are bad-mannered, admit it and retrain them. Let us stop living in a fool's paradise under the influence of Stable Blindness. It will save us money in entry fees and hours of frustration.

★ ★ ★

In a few weeks spring weather will allow us to saddle up and go for a good long ride. Unless your horse has been ridden or worked on a lunge line for at least half an hour each day during the layoff period it will not be in condition for more than one hours easy ride and must be cooled out carefully before being put away. Ten minutes at a jog each way on a lunge line each day, increasing it to a lope every other day for two weeks and then the full period at a lope will put your mount in suitable physical condition for early spring riding.

★ ★ ★

Owners of mares to foal in the next few months should feed the mare enough to keep her in good flesh but not fat. Exercise every day is a must for broodmares. Keep out of cold winds and don't allow grazing on frosted grass.

When making an appointment with the Vet for deworming this spring suggest that your animal's teeth be checked at the same time. If your horse raises his head and twists it to one side while chewing it is a sign teeth need attention.

Should you not be experienced enough to decide if your horse is wintering well ask someone whom you know has had horses and cared for them for years to look at your horse. Bad teeth condition plus an infestation of worms will prevent good feed in even large quantities from aiding your horse to keep fat during the winter.

A number of owners have their farriers shoe the horse on its front feet only at this time of the year. In most cases horses will go all right shod only in front with the soft ground at this time. Check with your horse-shoer. He'll advise. Many horses can go all summer barefoot on the hind feet if a little extra care is taken in choosing the riding path. This is a money saver.

More Contracts Up for Talks

More contracts involving more workers in British Columbia are up for renegotiation this year compared with last year.

The labor department reports that more than 450 major contracts covering nearly 235,000 workers are up for renewal this year.

This compares with more than 400 major contracts involving more than 185,000 workers last year.

The department notes that no longer does B.C. have "on" and "off" years for collective bargaining because of the one-year contract signed last year between Forest Industrial Relations and the International Woodworkers of America.

Major contracts to be negotiated this year include the IWA on the coast, Southern Interior and Northern Interior and the pulp and newsprint industry agreements with the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada and the Canadian Paperworkers — Union.

Most contracts will be expiring in the education, fishing, metal fabrication and transportation industries.

Key collective agreements in other industrial divisions include the B.C. Roadbuilders agreements, lower mainland municipal contracts, several B.C. government contracts and a number of large federal government collective agreements," said the labor department.

The total volume of contracts to be renegotiated is greater than ever before, it added.

The logging, wood products, pulp and newsprint contracts involve close to 50,000 workers. Other major employee groupings listed by the labor department include:

B.C. government employees, 37,938; teachers, 23,500; professional and non-professional hospital employees, 14,300; fishermen and plant workers, 5,100; grocery chain stores, 5,000; roadbuilders, 4,800.

The largest single group of employees, 70,966, are working under contracts which don't expire until December. Next biggest is 57,114 workers with contracts running out in June followed by 41,615 in September.

3 Singers, Song Cycles At Concert

Three singers and three song cycles will be featured in this Friday's regular concert, presented at Craigdarroch Castle by Victoria Conservatory of Music.

These concerts take place every Friday throughout the conservatory year and present either faculty soloists and groups or advanced students.

This week's vocal program begins with soprano Pierann Moon assisted at the piano by Jocelyn Abbott, performing a group of Debussy songs.

Baritone Michael Ekford, partnered by Janet Trotter at the piano, will perform a Beethoven work, An die Ferne Geliebte.

Berloiz' sequence of six songs under the title Les Nuits d'ete, will be sung by Dawn Hood, soprano, with Gordon Lazaravich at the piano.

SHOUTING, handclapping and dancing is definitely tolerated by the Dixieland Express which will perform this Friday and Feb. 7 at 9 p.m. at Duke's Jazz Club, 4558 Cordova Bay Road. The band has eight musicians—some straight out of the early 60s in England when a pub wasn't a pub unless it had a Dixieland band. Ernie Cockayne, left, is ready for the fray.

Acclaimed Duo In Concert

Petite and dainty as a figurine in appearance, Japan's brilliant young artist, Masuko Ushioda, plays her violin with unbelievable bravura and mastery.

She also brings to her playing, as her distinguished master, Josef Szigeti said: "the sense of style, the musical intelligence . . . the individuality of her lovely tone . . ."

Musko will appear jointly with her husband, the fine American cellist, Lawrence Lesser, in the solo spot with Laszlo Gati and the Victoria Symphony on Sunday and Monday.

The duo will perform Brahams' double concerto for violin and cello and Miss Ushioda will play the Bartok violin concerto.

Lesser, internationally acclaimed, a prize winner in the 1966 Tchaikovsky Competition and chamber music guest performer in the Heifetz-Piatigorsky concerts and recordings, was a student of Piatrigorsky and became his assistant at the University of Southern California.

He has played with the London Philharmonic, Los Angeles Philharmonic, the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Centre and at festivals around the world.

Miss Ushioda's current appearances have included the Concergebouw, Boston Symphony, L. A. Philharmonic, Vancouver Symphony, the ORTF in Paris and solo recitals throughout North America, Europe and South America.

The Sunday-Monday concert program at the Royal Theatre will be completed with a performance by the orchestra of Brahms' Tragic Overture.

On Friday the orchestra will continue its Duncan season with a program that will feature the Beethoven Triple Concerto. This performance will present Robin Wood at the piano with Ushioda and Lesser as the soloists.

The Duncan concerts take place in the Cowichan Secondary School auditorium at 8 p.m.

Saanich to Fight Land Act 'Goof'

On the instigation of municipal planner Tom Loney, Saanich will try to get the provincial government to correct a "goof" in the Land Registry Act.

It will also ask the Union of British Columbia Municipalities to back Saanich's campaign.

Loney told the lands, planning and housing committee meeting Tuesday a recent amendment to the act which allows consolidation of properties without municipal approval was a "goof" and "probably one of the best the province has ever pulled."

He said the amendment was probably meant for rural areas and the effect it could have on municipalities had not been considered.

Loney said his concern is that "a fundamental change in land use could take place which would be beyond the control of the municipality."

He urged strong and hasty representation be made to the province for changes in both the Land Registry and Plans Cancellation Acts to require the approving officer's signature prior to registration.

The latter act allows consolidation of separate lots or parcels without municipal approval if they are in the same plan.

"This concerns us," he said, "because many consolidations are for the purpose of apartment, commercial, industrial development, etc. uses which increase vehicular traffic."

In both instances, he said, the municipality has no way in which to demand road widening, which can be very expensive, especially after the property is rezoned.

As an example, Loney said, Saanich had a recent application to rebuild and extend a small shopping centre which needed road widening but the municipality was bypassed and the necessary lots consolidated under the new amendment to the Land Registry Act.

"We feel very strongly that consolidation of land should be subject to the approval of the approving officer in the same way that a plan of subdivision must be approved," he said.

In other business, the committee decided that Loney and municipal controller-treasurer R. F. Broughton should prepare a revised scale of fees for rezoning and land-us contract applications that would cover the cost of processing such applications.

C. Saanich Mulls Library

Central Saanich council will listen to the advantages of joining the Vancouver Island Regional Library system at its meeting Monday.

The municipality now is a member of the Greater Victoria Library Board, but Ald. Percy Lazarz recommended that aldermen visit the library at Sidney to have a firsthand look at how a regional library works.

Council decided to ask a representative from the regional library to speak at the committee meeting.

SST-Ozone Dangers Discounted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-year study dispels fear that the current fleet of supersonic transports will damage the earth's protective blanket of ozone, the U.S. transportation department said Tuesday.

Plans for a U.S. fleet of supersonic transports (SSTs) were scrapped in 1971 during debate about possible health and environmental damage.

The ozone blanket protects the earth from radiation that might cause skin cancer and from excessive heat from the sun.

John Barnum, deputy transportation secretary, said the Ford administration is not interested at this time in reviving plans for a U.S. SST fleet. The study was ordered by Congress in 1970.

The transportation department said it drew on more than 1,000 investigators and 16 U.S. and foreign government agencies to complete it.

The study says the 16 Anglo-French Concordes and 14 Soviet TU-144s now flying or scheduled for service will cause atmospehric changes so minimal they will be undetected.

But the study concludes that future expansion of stratospheric jet fleets should be carefully monitored.

Dr. Allan Grobecker, who directed the study, told a news conference it would require 125 Concordes flying 4½ hours daily to cause a detectable change in the ozone belt.

He said current instruments cannot measure ozone changes smaller than .5 per cent, which he likened to "spending an extra 45 minutes at the beach" in terms of skin damage.

His study noted, however, that man-made changes in radiation or temperature control "will lead to serious consequences, if either supersonic or subsonic fleets are expanded to large numbers without imposing a strict limitation on engine emissions."

Two Brothers Killed in Crash

Two brothers from Westholme were killed and their mother seriously injured Tuesday night when a pickup truck crashed into a bridge abutment near Chemainus.

Dead are Harvey Adolfus Holman, 34, the driver, and John Lynn Holman, 36.

In fair condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital is Mrs. Pearl Holman, 61, who suffered multiple fractures, possible stomach and head injuries.

Chemainus RCMP said today the truck was southbound on the Trans-Canada Highway about 11:30 p.m. when it went out of control, crossed the northbound land and rammed head-on an abutment of the bridge over the Chemainus River.

The brothers were declared dead on arrival at Chemainus General hospital. Their mother was later transferred from there to the Victoria hospital.

Recreation Training Offered

A recreation leadership training program for young people aged 15 to 18 in Greater Victoria will be launched next week by the Oak Bay parks and recreation staff.

Those interested can attend an organizational meeting Thursday night, 7 p.m. at Henderson Park Recreation Centre, 2291 Cedar Hill Crossroad. Enrollmtent will be limited to 40.

Program co-ordinated Sheila Landrigan said the course, which is funded by a Local Initiatives Program grant, will be in the evenings twice weekly until May.

It will offer lessons in tennis, badminton, group games and outdoor skills such as camping and canoeing. There will also be visits to recreation centres to try activities such as curling, golf, swimming and skating.

Discussion groups will deal with leadership skills, communication and interpersonal relations.

The training offers possibilities for summer and part-time employment, she said, and those taking part will be encouraged to work in Oak Bay summer activities and provide leadership as recreation programs and facilities grow.

COUNCIL SEEKING TAX PARING IDEAS

Saanich residents will be asked this week for their ideas on cutting taxes.

The council's next program in its Channel 10 television series at 9 p.m. Thursday will be on how municipal expenses affect a resident's tax bill.

On the program titled Deep in the Heart of Taxes, Ald. Joseph Bourque, former finance committee chairman, will use his own tax notice to explain the intricacies of Saanich's tax forms.

Bourque said council is anxious to know what optional services, such as parks and recreation programs, the public is willing to have cut to pare down costs.

The last half hour of the program will be for phone calls from viewers. The program will be chaired by Ald. Mel Couvelier, this year's finance committee chairman.

ACTING AUDITIONS SET

Auditions for enrolment in Vancouver's new Playhouse Acting School will take place for coastal British Columbians on Jan. 27 and 28, March 31 and April 1.

The auditions will be conducted by Powys Thomas who will be in Vancouver to star in the Playhouse Theatre's Of the Fields, Lately.

The Playhouse Acting School will be the only one of its kind in Canada directly attached to a professional company — the Playhouse Theatre Centre of B.C.

The two-session course will be in session from Oct. 27, 1975, to May 9, 1976, and Sept. 1 to April 30, 1977. It will offer full time training for the professional theatre. The first session will concentrate on acting, voice and movement.

In the second session the students, in addition to their regular course, will begin to take roles with the Playhouse Theatre Company.

The School will accept 12 students this year, the 12 to be the only students for the full two-year session. The next entry into the acting school will be in the fall of 1977.

Applicants are asked to prepare two pieces; one classic and one modern. They should be available for a call back later on the day of the audition.

They should be between 18 and 28 years of age.

Audition fees are $12 (non-returnable) but this fee will be deducted from the tuition fee of $750 per session if the applicant is successful.

Application forms can be obtained by writing the Playhouse Acting School, 575 Beatty Street, Vancouver V6B 2L7.

Services Link Communities

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Organization of essential services in Colwood, Langford and Metchosin, started two years ago, is beginning show results.

These services, considered vital in bringing a community together, are emphasized in new programs designed to meet the mental and physical needs of the residents. But political amalgamation is not among the goals.

Architect of the plan is psychiatrist Dr. Charles Gregory, who quit as director of the Victoria Mental Health Centre in frustration in 1966.

"I had wanted to build a structure of supplying services to Victoria," he said, "but I just couldn't get anywhere."

Now, working out of the Pacific Centre for Human Development — the former Pendray mansion that overlooks Esquimalt Lagoon — Gregory and his staff are helping create the kind of community he'd hoped to establish in Victoria.

Emphasizing his work is not the first step toward amalgamation of the three districts, "although the (provincial) government has threatened this," Gregory said:

"The prime objective is to teach the community to run itself. I want it emphasized that I am in no way interested in a political career of my own."

Gregory, who estimates that 25,000 people live in the three areas, has divided the district into four zones, each having three schools.

Each zone has its team of experts to care for the needs of the residents.

Regular meetings of the four teams begin this month. Each team has a social worker from the department of human resources, a public health nurse, two or three RCMP constables, two family workers from Gregory's centre, at least two school counsellors and a probation officer.

When he first went into private practice, Gregory initiated a home where emotionally disturbed children could receive residential care.

As part of his plan to create a more healthy community, Gregory reported the number of children in the home has dropped to 20 from 44.

The once-institutionalized children and their families are tackling their problems — and beating them — at home with the help of Pacific Centre personnel.

Gregory hopes eventually to have only about 10 children who need full residential care.

Project 15 is another Gregory program which is working. With the co-operation of Sooke School District, the Pacific Centre is working with "15 of the worst kids in the district." Aged between six and 15, all the children have been thrown out of school for behavior roblems.

A film on Project 15, being prepared at the centre by Gregory's wife, Anne, shows the children have an eagerness to learn.

Gregory explained the secret — a correlated program with the children, their families, family workers, special teachers and the teachers in the district — to which they'll return when the cure is complete.

Gregory, a child specialist, has chosen the schools for the initial forging of his community. His CLAM (Colwood, Langford and Metchosin) Project is teaching 55 high school students to examine themselves and their community.

CLAM is a social studies project in which the students make films and record what is going on in their community.

"They're so enthused, they're here tape-editing Saturdays and Sundays," Gregory said, "And even four days of the holidays. They're so good, their work would compare favorably with any professional job."

The program has awakened an awareness of community needs. They now ask such questions as what ecological damage is being done, by a new subdivision on Esquimalt Lagoon.

Children are being helped indirectly by another program which provides pre-employment training for mothers. One course has been completed and Gregory said six of the women have already gained their Grade 12 certificates. Most of them left to bring up a family alone. The women have also regained the self-esteem which life had knocked out of them. Another course is under way.

A day-care centre will be operated, beginning Feb. 1, in a building leased to the Pacific Centre by the school district. Open to children of three to five years of age, the centre will be open daily from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Apart from meeting the obvious needs, Gregory explained, the centre will also be used as a tool to teach parents how to deal with children and provide practical training for high school students enrolled in child-care courses.

In line with Gregory's policy of teaching a community to run itself, the day-care centre, once it is running smoothly, will be turned over to a non-profit community organization.

Gregory has also bought the Juan de Fuca News Review because he's convinced any community must have a newspaper which is prepared to help develop a community identity.

He sees the paper as tool which will accomplish another objective — good local government.

"I want people to get an idea of what local government means," he said. "When they make decisions they should be able to make them on an informed basis."

Again stressing he has no political aspirations, Gregory said:

"The role of a professional working in such an area is not that of a direct participant in the advocacy of any particular point of view.

"Rather, it is to ensure that as many people as possible become aware of the choices facing them and are as completely informed as it is possible to be as to the nature of those choices."

IRAQ ASKS ARMS

BEIRUT (QP) — Iraq has turned to the Soviet Union for heavy artillery to match the 155 and 175 millimetre artillery guns being used by Kurdish and Iranian forces inside northeastern Iraq, Arab sources said Monday.

The urgent request by the Iraqi for new Russian artillery, advanced MiG fighter bombers and, according to one report that could not be confirmed here, surface-to-surface missiles, appears to reflect growing military troubles for Baghdad, which has been forced to begin calling up reserve officers, 36 and 37, to replace Iraq's losses against the Kurds, these sources reported.

The sources, who are well acquainted with the 10-month-old civil war being waged between the Kurdish forces of General Mullah Mustafa Barzani and the Baathist government of Baghdad, confirmed Beirut press reports Sunday that a large new Iraqi-Soviet arms deal has been concluded.

A new Iraqi effort to get Iran's Shawh Mohammed Reza Pahlavi to halt his military support for Barzani's Pesh Merga forces collapsed Sunday when talks between the Iraqi and Iranian foreign ministers in Istanbul ended without producing any results.

The Shah is reported by Arab sources to have told Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in Cairo a week ago that while he had no border problem with Iraq that could not be negotiated, he saw no hope of reaching any agreement with the Baathist government, which he termed a threat to the entire region.

No Guarantees In Gov't Aid To Art—Critic

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Government support for the arts in Canada cannot be considered endless and some artistic ventures are bound to fail through lack of funds, critic Arnold Edinburgh said here today.

Newly-appointed president and chief executive officer of the Council for Business and the Arts in Canada, Edinburgh was here to consult with administrators of the provincial government's cultural fund and to talk to corporate leaders in Vancouver to solicit funds for developing the arts and making them more useful to business.

The council was formed last year with the objective of encouraging research of the visual and performing arts for business and others; stimulating contact between business and art; encouraging financial support by business; and advancement of the arts as a part of society.

Efforts were launched with a once-only $25,000 Canada Council grant.

Edinburgh said the Canada Council share of deficits run up by recipients of grants is rising and can't be allowed to continue.

A few corporate officers interested in the arts realized this and wondered if the business community generally was aware of it. Their consultations led to creation of the Business and Arts Council, which now has 27 corporate members at $1,000 each membership fee.

By the end of the year Edinburgh expects there will be 80-100 memberss.

He sees his role as largely advisory, and as a consultant he expects to be a teacher.

"The arts have to learn. They can't do what they want any more than any one else," Edinburgh said.

It was sad that some perish as a result of doing the wrong things, he said. But it was equally wrong to think "we can go on supporting everything," that government aid is endless.

"It is easy to give the people what you think they should have and get the money for it out of a central pot," Edinburgh said.

E. C. Bovey, of Toronto, chairman of Northern and Central Gas, was head of a steering committee that recuited Edinburgh to run the council. Among those on the board of directors are George Currie, senior executive of MacMillan Bloedel, and John Prentice, chairman of Canadian Forest Products Ltd.

There are also senior members of Eaton's, Rothman's of Pall Mall, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Southam Press and Imperial Oil.

Edinburgh noted corporations have largely been relieved of health and hospital care responsiblilities through development of, provincial government plans, and thus should be able to divert some of the savings to the arts.

Corporations should realize, he said, that they exist both as employers and consumers of the arts. The arts may be used in promotional activities, to improve the Canadian image overseas or as a vehicle of corporate fulfilment of social responsiblitity, he said.

The public also is aware of the arts and wants more: "We want to convince business the desire is there on the part of the consumer," Edis-

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Three men and a woman appeared in Victoria provincial court Tuesday facing an array of charges stemming from an incident in Colwood Monday night when an RCMP officer was allegedly assaulted.

Oliver Cottam, 29, of 1053 Jenkins, was charged with assaulting Const. Gordon Stainer; his brother, John, 31, of the same address, with resisting arrest and impaired driving.

Stainer, who was not injured, was investigating a single car accident in the 2900-block Jacklin Road at the time.

Two others, believed passengers in the car, Allan Alvin-Agot Anderson, 36, of 822 Esquimalt, and Wendy Thomas, 29, of 1053 Jenkins, were charged jointly with obstructing a police officer.

Judge William Ostler remanded them to Jan. 28 for plea. He set $500 surety bail for both of the Cottam brothers but released the other two in their own undertaking.

★ ★ ★

"You've been to jail before for theft," Ostler said to Stan Joseph, 23. "I would have thought you'd have learned your lesson."

Joseph of 82 West Saanich Road had just pleaded guilty to shoplifting a $78 radio cassette player from Woolco July 25.

He also pleaded guilty to failing to appear in court July 30 and to driving without a driver's licence June 8 in Colwood, and June 17 in Duncan.

But prosecutor Clarence Vause rose to Joseph's defence. He said ordinarily he would have asked for a prison term but wouldn't in this case because it would likely mean Joseph losing his job.

Ostler agreed, but then warned the accused: "You have accumulated a very bad record . . . if you continue you are going to have to go to jail . . . I don't want to send you to prison or have you lose your job but I am bound to protect the public."

He set fines totalling $375.

★ ★ ★

Bradley Ross Carter, 19, of 4145 Douglas, and John William Needles, 22, of Vancouver, were each fined $75 for possession of marijuana.

A preliminary hearing will begin April 1 for Gilles Paul Proulx, 29, of Montreal, charged with extortion.

Proulx, who elected trial by judge and jury, was charged Jan. 9 with inducing Toronto-Dominion bank manager Edgar McBride to pay the sum of $100,000.

The charge was laid after a package was delivered to the bank with a letter saying it contained a bomb.

Proulx is free on his own recognizance in the sum of $1,000.

3 Legal Posts Open

The head of the Greater Victoria prosecutors' office says there has been "some difficulty" in finding new staff members in the face of recent resignations.

J. W. Anderson was commenting Tuesday on three recent resignations within his eight - member prosecuting staff. Leaving are John Robbins, Gordon Macdonald and C. W. Vause.

"We trust, however, that replacements will be located as each of the three prosecutors leave," he said.

Anderson said one reason for the turnover of prosecutors is that there are many openings for young lawyers and that crown prosecution is a more limited application of law.

He declined to comment on whether pay was a factor in attracting new staff. Recent newspaper ads for the positon have shown a salary range from $14,000 to $30,000.

First to leave will be Robbins, who has decided to return in mid-February to the Alberta foothills ranch which he and his family left about a year ago.

Gordon Macdonald, a six-year RCMP officer before he was called to the bar in 1972, will leave the prosecuting staff to set up private practice April 1 in the old court house on Bastion Square. Macdonald said he feels it is time "to make a break" from prosecuting and try defence work instead.

Vause said he has not yet decided what he will do after he leaves in April.

MOTHER EARTH NEWS

What's Cooking?—Savings

By JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH

For the second fall in a row, fuel was both scarce and expensive. And, once again, a growing number of people are trying to cut their dependency on petroleum, natural gas and coal . . . and the electricity which is largely generated by burning such fossil fuels.

Well, there are many ways for a family to lessen its consumption of oil, coal, gas and electricity . . . and one of the most fun ways of all is by installing a genuine, old-timey wood-burning cookstove in the kitchen.

Yes, I know. New wood-burners are as costly as everything else these days. And the demand for them is so great that they're back ordered for months. And it costs an arm and a leg to buy enough cordwood to run one through a winter. I know all about that.

On the other hand, there are still a goodly number of used cast-iron "kitchen queens" stashed away in backrooms, old farmhouses, basements and outbuildings all over the United States and Canada. The $10 and $20 ones are long gone, but $100 or less will still fetch home a good wood-burning cookstove in most sections of the country. And anyone with any ambition at all can still make a deal with parks and estates to gather deadfall limbs . . . or offer to buzz up "weed" trees for a farmer . . . or agree to haul junk packing crates and skids away from nearby factories in return for the wood.

So OK. So other folks really are saving a chunk of money by recycling old cast-iron kitchen ranges and scavenging the wood to burn in them. Maybe you can too. The idea, at any rate — depending on your circumstances — might be worth looking into. So start reading the classified ads in your local newspapers (or place a few ads of your own) and let's see what happens.

Merri Swid, a young back-to-the-lander now living in West Virginia, recently made a successful switch to cooking on a big, old "Home Comfort" wood-burner and she offers a few tips as you look for the stove of your dreams.

HOW TO GET ACQUAINTED WITH A WOOD-BURNING COOKSTOVE

"In particular," says Merri, "beware of ranges with warped top surfaces. The distorted metal will leak smoke, and is often a sign that coal has been burned to produce a very hot fire. Usually this also means that the walls and grates in the firebox are in poor shape.

"Fire walls, if not too badly damaged, can be repaired with special fire-wall cement (obtainable from your local hardware store). Grates are a harder problem. If your stove was made by a company that's still in business, you can get replacements. Otherwise, you may have to search until you find another old stove you can cannibalize . . . or until you locate a machine shop or blacksmith that will construct a set of grates for you.

"Don't worry too much about rust, unless the surface of your stove is badly pitted. A superficial coating will burn off in use and blacking will restore that shiny finish you envisioned."

Merri also advises that, once you've chosen your "Home Comfort" or "Foster Agate" or "Family Sunshine," you haul the purchase home and take off all its easily removable parts (lids, firebox cover, hot water reservoir, etc.). "Give the stove a thorough cleaning," she says. "Tighten up all loose bolts at the same time and examine the range's drafts so you'll know what each one does and how to regulate the temperature of your stove."

Old-timey wood-burning ranges, in case you didn't know, usually have three main drafts. First (and most obvious) is the stovepipe with a built-in damper that regulates the unit's "draw." Second is a small grille on either the side or back of the firebox which can be opened or closed to admit more or less air into the combustion chamber. And third is an internal draft which directs the blaze around or away from the stove's oven and water reservoir.

If you don't know how to hook a stovepipe to your new pride and joy, there's sure to be an old-timer in the neighborhood who does. Invite him over and, while he's helping you make the proper connections, he'll probably point out that the "slow," "moderate" and "hot" dial on the front of your range's oven indicates rough temperatures of 200 to 325 degrees, 325 to 400, and 400 degrees on up respectively.

That may sound like fairly wide tolerances, but a little experimentation with dampers and wood in the firebox will soon show you how to hold the oven within 25 degrees of whatever temperature a recipe calls for.

That's good enough for a start and all the introduction to a wood-burning stove you'll need. The rest is up to you.

For more complete wood-burning cookstove "operating instructions," send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to The Mother Earth News, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Ask for Reprint No. 164, "Cookstove."

'AMATEUR SURVEY' SHOWS HOW CITY PRICES STACK

Ever wonder how everyday food prices in other corners of the world compare with the ones you see shopping in Victoria?

Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, has just returned from a holiday visit to his native Scotland. He and his family conducted their own "amateur survey" comparing food costs in Glasgow and Victoria.

Listed below are prices for two dozen common items. Bear in mind prices can move rapidly, usually up, and "specials" you may know of are not typical.

While food costs in Scotland appear generally lower, wages also appear to be between one-half to two-thirds of those in Canada.

Arneil said gasoline, which sells locally from 57 to 65 cents a gallon, costs $1.69 a gallon in Glasgow and went up 23 cents a gallon overnight while he was there. The word is it will go to one pound sterling (about $2.30) a gallon by Easter.

Read This and Taste Treat Is in the Bag

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

NEW YORK (NYT) — It was a come-on, of course, but uncommonly compelling. It was an advertisement of Alitalia airlines and stated in part, "Unless you've been to the Trattoria di Ciccio in Amalfi, you don't know how spaghetti should taste. First, Ciccio makes a sauce with clams and olives. Next he boils some spaghetti. Then he puts both things into a paper bag, folds it shut and heats it in an oven. What comes out of that paper bag isn't just spaghetti with sauce on it. But spaghetti with sauce in it."

To our great regret we've never been to Amalfi and never dined with di Ciccio but with enough of a clue from Alitalia we've contrived what must be a fair approximation of his dish.

Interestingly enough, paper bag cooking, although never widespread in Europe, has a long and interesting history. In French it is called "en papillote." In Italian it is "al cartoccio."

We have in our possession a book by one Nicolas Soyer titled "Soyer's Paper-Bag Cookery," published in New York in 1911. Soyer, the frontispiece notes, was the "late chef of the Brooks's (sic) Club in London," and his book embraces such fare as stewed eels and stuffed haddock; Irish stew and curried venison. There are listings for savory oysters and a salmis of duck.

Soyer's book informs the user that "Specially prepared bags are made only by The Union Bag and Paper Company, 17 Battery Place, New York," a firm which, to the best of our knowledge, no longer exists. And, let it be added as an anti-climax, Soyer's book — long out of print — is worth more as a curiosity than as a practical guide to the subject.

The most famous — indeed the most celebrated cooked - in - paper dish in America is the New Orleans specialty, pompano en papillote. In France, veal chops are occasionally cooked in paper. In both cases, and doubtlessly what di Ciccio in Italy employs, parchment paper, is used to make the "bag" or casing.

In the dish we fabricated recently we used a double fold of heavy duty aluminum foil and it worked admirably. Parchment is far less available and has a tendency at times to burn in a very hot oven.

To prepare the dish, spaghetti or linguine is parboiled for exactly five minutes. It is quickly drained and emptied, along with sauce and the chopped clams, into a foil-lined baking dish. The foil is sealed as hermetically as possible taking care that steam or liquid cannot escape as the mixture cooks. The dish is baked in a very hot oven for exactly 10 minutes and it is ready to serve.

The foil pouch is opened either with scissors or the fingers, using a cloth to guard against burning. The spaghetti and sauce are distributed into one or more soup bowls and served immediately.

Imported pasta — widely available in Italian markets — does, to our way of thinking, work best in the recipe.

TOMATO SAUCE

4 cups red, ripe, fresh or canned peeled tomatoes.
2 tablespoon olive oil.
1 tablespoon chopped garlic, more or less to taste.
½ cup finely chopped parsley.
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.
1 teaspoon dried oregano.
1 tablespoon dried basil.
¾ teaspoon dried red pepper flakes more or less to taste, optional.

1. Place the tomatoes in a saucepan and cook over moderate heat, stirring frequently, until the tomatoes are reduced to about two cups.

2. Heat the oil in a saucepan and add the garlic. Cook briefly without browning. Add the tomatoes, parsley, salt, pepper, oregano, basil and pepper flakes. Cook, stirring, until thoroughly blended. Remove from the heat.

Yield: About two cups.

Note: This sauce will keep well stored tightly covered in the refrigerator. It can be frozen.

FOIL-WRAPPED SPAGHETTI IN RED CLAM SAUCE

1 cup tomato sauce (see recipe).
20 black olives, preferably imported Greek or Italian.
24 to 30 littleneck clams, approximately (see note).
½ pound spaghetti.

1. Preheat the oven to 500 degrees.

2. Prepare the tomato sauce and have it heated just to the point of boiling.

3. Remove the pits from the black olives and cut the olives in half. Add this to the tomato sauce. Bring to the boil and keep very hot while finishing the dish.

4. Line a baking dish with a double layer of heavy-duty aluminum foil, leaving the edges and ends free to be folded later into a package. Gently press the centre of the foil to make a "well" for the spaghetti when it is cooked.

5. Open the clams and drain them, reserving, both clams and their juice. There should be about half a cup of clams and at least three-quarters cup of juice. Use only three-quarters cup of juice. Heat the clam broth until nearly boiling. Chop the clams and set aside.

6. Drop the spaghetti into boiling salted water and stir until it becomes limp. Cook exactly five minutes; no longer.

7. Immediately drain the spaghetti into a colander and empty it into the centre of the foil. Add the tomato sauce, clam broth and clams. Quickly bring up the ends of the foil and seal securely all around, taking care that the sauce cannot escape at any point. Place the dish in the oven and bake exactly 10 minutes.

8. Remove the dish from the oven and, using a cloth and scissors, cut open the top of the foil. Transfer the spaghetti with the sauce to one or two spaghetti bowls and serve immediately. Serve with freshly grated parmesan cheese, if desired.

Yield: One main dish serving or two first course servings.

Note: The sizes of clams vary considerably and so does the inner liquid they yield. It may be necessary to use more or fewer clams to produce the volumes indicated. Cherrystone clams can be used in place of littlenecks, but they may not be as tender.

Note: This recipe may be doubled, but the baking time should be increased to about 12 minutes. Linguine can be substituted for spaghetti.

SINGLE WOMEN'S BOOK

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Winnipeg-based group says it hopes to publish a book this year on the social and economic situation of Canadian women who have never married.

Marianne Bossen, a Winnipeg economist, said a newly-formed editorial committee intends to apply for financial aid to the federal secretary of state department.

She said the planned publication would replace a national conference on never-married women which had been scheduled for May at the University of Manitoba.

The committee has started a library of information about the more than half a million Canadian women 25 years and over who have never married, 41 per cent of whom live in Quebec.

DILL-ICIOUS Sauerbraten Supper is not typical diet food but by using beef brisket (fat well trimmed) and low-calorie vegetables and zippy dill pickles to impart a German-style flavor, it adds up to 375 calories per three-ounce serving.

Your Turn to Cook—Coconut Cake

(Today's reader recipe, a cake baked with its own topping, was submitted by Mary Barber of 209 Wildwood.)

By MARY BARBER

One of my mother's recipes, it is to be baked at 350 degrees until the coconut topping is nicely browned. I can't give an exact baking time because of mother's day of coal and wood stoves. You just bake it until it is done, she said.

Estimated baking time is about 45 minutes to an hour.

COCONUT CAKE

Cake
- ½ cup butter
- 2 egg yolks
- 1 cup flour
- ½ t. salt
- ¼ cup milk
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 whole egg
- 1 t. baking powder
- 1 t. vanilla

Topping
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 t. vanilla
- 2 egg whites
- 1 cup coconut

Mix the cake as you would any other. For the topping, beat the egg whites until stiff, adding sugar gradually. Vanilla and coconut are folded into the egg white mixture.

Spread the topping on the unbaked cake and bake all at once as specified above.

The best to you from Palm.

Doggie Bags Are 'In' New Target: Waste

By ANDREW H. MALCOLM

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — Doggie bags are in.

So are smaller portions, homemade soups, cheaper meats, fewer desserts, smaller butter patties, bacon-free breakfasts, left-overs stews and even a broccoli sandwich or two.

From the Montauk Point to the Golden Gate, Americans are taking steps — some tentative, some serious, some ludicrous — to alter their eating patterns and reduce food waste.

Seemingly spurred more by the rising costs of food here than by any overwhelming humanitarian concern for starving masses elsewhere, family food managers are scraping the dinner plates into the refrigerator for future use. And restaurant managers are monitoring dirty dishes for telltale signs of wasted food that could suggest potential savings in future servings.

"I think we're all being schooled in a whole new way of thinking about food," said one restauranteur here.

Raised amid plenty, many North Americans in the last year have abruptly come to expect shortages of gasoline, sugar, toilet paper and other precious commodities. There is no shortage of food here yet. But neither is there a shortage of high food prices. And as a result many Americans are talking of food conservation.

"I used to be a dumper," said Susan Tigmarsh, a suburban San Francisco mother of two. "I'd throw out everything left on the plate, or give it to the birds or the dog. But in the last few months I've gotten very careful. I've got a rotten pineapple I should throw out. But I can't. Every-time I look at it I see 98 cents shot."

Like many other shoppers across the country, she has also altered her menu — Less steak, less crab and more ground beef, stews and soups.

Jerry Boyes makes longer-lasting casseroles now in her Los Angeles kitchen and stopped buying snack foods. Margaret Streeter of Seattle buys a medium-sized packet of meat now instead of the large and serves her husband a smaller serving.

"We even switched to cloth napkins to save a few cents, Mrs. Streeter said. And she finds herself much more conscious of preparing just enough for one meal to avoid leftovers that always seem to spoil in the refrigerator.

Last week Rita Kromelow, a Chicago interior designer, cooked a whole chicken for broth, added mushrooms to the meat to stuff crepes, and the unused crepe batter went into cheese blintzes.

"Leftovers?" she said. "Who can afford leftovers?"

Wasted food is, of course, not peculiarly American; some estimates say up to 40 per cent of some African crops never reach consumers but are lost through inefficient methods of harvesting, shipping and storing.

Nor is food wastage new; some Elizabethan feasts would put a typical Christmas dinner here to shame.

Nonetheless, Americans, who began life on this continent by borrowing foods from the Indians, have over the years established a reputation as purveyors of plenty, people who dumped leftover food into the garbage.

A study of 380 unsuspecting households by the University of Arizona and the Tucson Sanitation Department produced an estimate that during 1974 Tucson residents alone dumped 9,538 tons of edible food into the city's sanitary landfill. This included $1.2-million worth of vegetables, $570,000 worth of beef and $750,000 in pastries.

As one effort to change food consumption patterns and reduce food wastes, groups such as Oxfam-America and World Vision International have held or plan one-day fasts. On Nov. 21, for instance, 250,000 Americans participated in a nationwide fast.

Don't Be Chicken—Try Tasty Eggplant

By HILDA BEASTALL

Eggplant, a fruit or vegetable—take your choice — better known in Europe and eastern countries than in Canada, is a food capable of being used to add variety to winter menus. It appears in local vegetable display now and although never in the really low price group, you can use it with other vegetables and meats, in very much the same way as mushrooms.

Eggplant fruits seen here have the shiny smooth purple skin, lovely to look at. Tropical countries have cream colored and striped variations too. Don't buy one which is dull or badly wrinkled for these are signs of aging and result in a rather bitter and dull taste.

The fruits keep best in cool air, uncovered in the refrigerator, so don't be tempted by seeing two or three in a plastic bag marked down to perhaps three for 35 cents. They won't be worth it. Fresh eggplant sells at this season between 39 and 49 cents each with a weight of around one pound, with no waste in paring or coring.

Nutrient value is not abundant, though sufficient to warrant use with other vegetables having high vitamin content and with grain foods already high in protein. One rating for eggplant gives a little protein, some vitamin A, and traces of calcium and iron.

According to some gardeners who grow them, eggplant is just something to fry with bacon but other more delicious and useful ways are easy enough to develop.

While preparing, have a cut lemon handy for squeezing the juice over the cut eggplant surface to prevent discoloration and flavor loss. Just wipe the cut lemon over the eggplant slices squeezing as you go. There is no need to peel a perfect eggplant fruit.

Work quickly at further dicing when necessary. Get the pieces into the covered pan or casserole within minutes, mixing with other ingredients to prevent loss of nutrients.

Quick Eggplant Supper (Skillet or Covered)

1 Tbsp. chopped onion.
1 Eggplant, unpeeled, diced.
3 Tbsb. boiling water.
¼ cup tomato juice (drained from can).
¼ Tsp. or less salt.
½ cup wheat germ.
1 Tbsp. margarine.
¼ cup grated cheddar cheese.

Have skillet or covered frypan ready with boiling water; add onion and steam while preparing eggplant quickly as directions given above. Steam gently for about 10 minutes stirring occasionally and adding another spoonful of boiling water if needed to prevent sticking.

When eggplant just fork tender, add tomato juice gradually, retaining gentle bubbling. Salt sparingly as very little is needed. Simmer 5 minutes.

Sprinkle with wheat germ, topped with margarine and grated cheese. Set aside, covered, while preparing plates with chosen cooked or raw vegetables, or buttering some wholewheat toast. Serves 4.

A macaroni casserole dinner, substituting eggplant for mushrooms makes a notable change. Chopped leftover cooked bacon, ham, or turkey that you put away to freeze after Christmas, may be added in a small amount to increase total value. Serve with carrots and a green leafy vegetable; 4 generous servings.

Eggplant Dinner Casserole

1 cubed eggplant.
½ cup chopped celery with leaves.
1 clove garlic, whole.
½ cup boiling water.
½ Tsp. salt.
2 cups cooked macaroni.
Chopped cooked meat as desired.
1 cup canned tomato.
¼ cup wheat germ.
¼ cup grated Cheddar cheese.

Prepare eggplant quickly as before. Add with celery and whole garlic to boiling water in saucepan. Cover and cook gently for 10 minutes. Add salt.

Grease a casserole having a lid.

Pour in half the eggplant mixture. Top with half the cooked macaroni, add meat if used. Another layer of eggplant, and the macaroni; pour the tomato over the top.

Bake, covered, in moderate oven about 350 Deg. for 20 minutes. Sprinkle with wheat germ and grated cheese; return to oven without cover for 10 minutes.

This dish can be totally cooked in a covered skillet or frypan, as the previous recipe, if desired.

Eggplant Patties are tasty, nutritious and made with equal quantities of diced eggplant and soy flour, with a few ground nuts, moistened with enough tomato juice to form into patties. Season lightly with salt. Brown on each side in oil or margarine.

Stuffed Eggplant resembles stuffed squash in some ways. Slice in half lengthways and cook, cut side down, in covered pan with a little water until barely fork tender.

Remove from pan carefully, scoop out some of the pulp. Mix it with chopped parsley, celery leaf, a little cooked brown rice and wheat germ and a very little tomato juice. Pile back into eggplant shells.

Bake at 350 Degs. for 20 minutes. Serve with other vegetables.

For a finale — Eggplant Surprise, almost a dessert.

Eggplant Dessert

1 Tsp. chopped onion.
2 Tbsp. margarine.
1 cup diced winter squash.
1 cup diced eggplant.
½ cup canned tomato, drained of juice.
¼ cup chopped raw peanuts.
3 or 4 dates, stoned and chopped.
1 small apple, diced.
1 Tsp. brewer's yeast.
Cooked brown rice or wholewheat toast slices.

Cook the onion a few minutes in the margarine. Add eggplant, squash, tomato, peanuts, dates, apple; stir occasionally. Keep covered. Add another spoonful tomato juice or boiling water if becoming too thick. Simmer gently until eggplant tender. Springle brewer's yeast over top. Stir well to mix.

Serve at once on hot brown rice, or on thick slices of buttered wholewheat toast.

Favor to Everyone

DEAR ABBY: I thought you might be interested in the following true story:

On November 29, I flew from Dallas, Texas to Little Rock, Arkansas. The flight was filled, and because I got on at the last minute I was given a seat in the NO SMOKING section.

I wanted a cigarette, so I took one out of the pack and put it in my mouth, but before lighting it, I turned to the very attractive lady who was my seat partner, and asked, "Do you mind if I smoke?"

She smiled a pretty smile and replied, "Why don't you do us both a favor, sir, and refrain?"

I was jolted. I put the cigarette back in the package and haven't had one since. In other words, I quit — cold turkey! After being a two-pack-a-day man, that's quite an accomplishment. Nobody can believe it.

It took a few words from a stranger to get me to do something I've been putting off for years. Why am I telling you this, Abby? Because you were that woman. How can I thank you? — Cold Turkey in Arkansas

DEAR COLD: You just did. Write to me next year at this time, and if you're still "clean," I'll send you a present!

DEAR ABBY: I played post office as a child in England. Here's how we played it:

One member of the party would be elected "postmaster." He (or she) would then station himself (or herself) in an adjoining room.

Each person remaining would be given a number, let us say one through 20. Through the door, the postmaster called out a number. Whoever had that number would join him in the other room. If they were of the opposite sex they would kiss; if not they would shake hands.

The postmaster would then join the rest of the party, and the one whose number was called took his turn at being postmaster.

The trick was to try to guess the number of the person you wanted most to kiss. — DALE in S.F.

CONFIDENTIAL TO CONCERNED BROTHER in L.A.: It's not true that people who threaten to commit suicide seldom do. Tell your sister that when she feels "low" she should call the SUICIDE PREVENTION CENTRE. A trained member of their staff will be glad to talk with her about her problem. They are listed in your telephone directory.

Scientist Jonas Salk exemplifies many qualities of his zodiacal sign, Scorpio. Dr. Salk declares that intuition plays an important part in his research. That is Scorpio, digging deep, getting beneath the surface, utilizing the inexplicable or unknown to an ultimate, practical purpose. Scorpio loves a mystery and is the kind of detective who is relentless in a search for facts, no matter where the chips may fall.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Check directions, appointments. Family member may have confused travel plans. Some persons are telling proverbial tall stories. Know it and maintain creative skepticism. Steer clear of scheme which could result in wild-goose chase.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you neglect details, you pay more than you should for product. Social contacts prove fruitful. Come out of emotional shell. Some lively people are interested in what you say and think — let them be aware of you. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): One in authority may want you to sign an agreement. Cycle is high enough for you to insist on best possible terms. Your sense of timing is on target. Read between the lines and speak your piece.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Now you can ask questions and obtain answers. You could also gain access to privileged information. You obtain glimpse behind the scenes. Representative of club, organization may ask you to appear on special program.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends may be misinformed about costs, potential and availabilities. Do your own checking. What you seek is close to home base. Taurus, Libra individuals could figure prominently. Reconcile differences with family member.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What appears finished may actually require some "finishing touches." Know it and check structure. Someone may be trying to sell you proverbial bill of goods. Protect your interests. Don't skimp on quality. You'll understand!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): some ideas come fast and furiously — but they need "development" time and money. Know it and take position that represents responsibility. Impatient associates may mean well but could also be misinformed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish, complete, distribute. Don't throw good money after bad — let go of past and prepare for future. One who confides and pleads may be seeking a green light, not an honest opinion. Know it and don't get inextricably involved. Conserve — find better ways to utilize assets.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lie low. Wait and see. Shake off tendency to feel that you must take direction. If you don't know what to do, do nothing. Emphasis is on legal loophole, lease which is "tricky." Be a keen, shrewd observer. Realize no one is giving you something for nothing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Low-key approach is best — study Sagittarius message for valid hint. Accent is on what is basic, a moderate pace and a tendency to "fight" your own digestive system. Don's force issues. Dine while relaxed.

AQUUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Highlight versatility. Don't feel there is one and only one method, procedure. You do have right to question — and experiment. Give full rein to intellectual curiosity. Love and impulse combine — and you could learn some lessons. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Prospects for future are analyzed. Includes home, property, renting, buying and selling. Details now are more important than usual. You leave an idelible impression on one at the top. Your feats, talents are being discussed.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are unorthodox, fond of travel, attractive to opposite sex and beginning a new, exciting period in your life. July should be most significant in 1975. Gemini, Virgo persons play key roles in your sphere. You are enthusiastic about learning, reading, lecturing. You often sacrifice in order to share or impart knowledge.

Sour Advice for Diabetics

By DR. JEAN MAYER

Q. I have recently been told by my doctor that I have a mild case of diabetes. He said if I'd avoid sweets and lose weight, I'd probably be fine. Since then my wife's been buying me dietetic cookies to satisfy my taste for sweets. Are they all right?

A. The only grounds on which dietetic cookies can be defended is that they contain sorbitol, a sweetener which the body uses more slowly than ordinary sucrose or table sugar. When a diabetic eats sorbitol sweetened cookies the type of rapid rise in blood sugar that occurs when you eat regular sweets does not occur.

There the advantages stop, however. Dietetic cookies contain the same number of calories as comparable cookies of the same size. Moreover, the calories come from exactly the same ingredients as all other cookies: flour, egg, nonfat milk solids and shortening.

One brand of so-called "dietetic" lemon sandwich cookies, for example, contains 60 calories per cookie, the same amount as in a slice of regular bread. Or put another way, if you ate two of these a day, over and above your normal caloric needs, you would gain a pound a month!

The cost of dietetic snacks also is extremely high. In checking prices recently, dietetic sugar wafers cost nearly three times as much as regular sugar wafers, and dietetic sandwich cookies were four times more expensive than regular sandwich cookies.

If you must lose weight — and that's particularly sound advice for a newly discovered, overweight diabetic — I'm afraid dietetic sweets will be of little help. Fruit is still the best dessert, not only for diabetics, but for the rest of us, too.

Q. Since the scare over botulism in canned mushrooms, they have been on special sale at my supermarket a number of times. But frankly, I'm afraid to buy them. Can I be sure mushrooms are really safe now?

A. According to the FDA, canned mushrooms are probably safer than they have ever been.

In February of 1973, Botulism toxin was found in an institutional size can of mushrooms. The cause was quickly traced to a new piece of equipment being used by the processor to fill cans. The plant packed the mushrooms so tightly that the cooking process was not adequate to penetrate and sterilize the product thoroughly. As a result, the botulism spores (which, incidentally are present everywhere in our environment and are harmless unless confined under airless conditions where they can grow and produce toxin) were not being killed.

A second discovery of botulism toxin in mushrooms prompted the FDA to launch an inspection of all 42 mushroom - canning plants in this country. And indeed canning procedures were not completely safe!

The most serious and widespread problem was that heat treatments and temperature levels had not been properly adjusted to keep up with changes and innovations that had been made over the years. Heat was not adequately getting through to the centre of the can in order to kill the spores.

Canning procedures have now been modified so that any mushrooms on your grocer's shelf should be perfectly safe. Moreover, it should be pointed out that as unsettling as the mushroom scare was, not one case of illness from botulism was reported. And the FDA has expanded its surveillance of the canning industry to protect against similar incidents.

(Dr. Mayer welcomes questions from readers. While he cannot reply to them all individually, he will answer those of general interest in his column. Write to Dr. Jean Mayer, in care of the Victoria Times.)

Another 'Bridey Murphy' Surfaces

ELKTON, Va. (UPI) — Evoking memories of the "Bridey Murphy" furor two decades ago, a middle-aged minister's wife has described under hypnosis her life — and murder — as a young girl named Gretchen Gottlieb in German a century ago.

Delores Jay's mystic trip to Bismark's Germany began in 1870. Her husband, Rev. Carroll Jay, hypnotized her "for a backache or something. When I finished I asked her if it still hurt.

"She answered something that sounded like 'Nein,' but I couldn't make anything of it," said the Methodist minister. Given another answer in what appeared to be German he said he "got out my tape recorder and began to tape her."

A language teacher confirmed the language was German, a language Mrs. Jay, 52, never learned.

Dr. Ian Stevenson, a University of Virginia psychology professor, and other German-speaking professors became interested.

In three years of interviews Mrs. Jay described under hypnosis life as a Catholic burgermeister's daughter in a tiny village named Ebeswald.

"Gretchen was about 16 years old and lived during the 1870s," Jay said. "She is illiterate and can't read or write."

In a terror-filled voice she described her family's suffering at the hands of Bismark's followers during his conflicts with German Catholics.

Her father was jailed and Gretchen was captured and killed by a group of men in a forest where she had hidden horses to help her uncle escape his enemies.

The tale resembles that of a young Colorado housewife who used the pseudonym Ruth Sinnons. Under hypnosis she described her life as "Bridey Murphy" in 19th century Ireland.

In 1956 Morey Bernstein, a businessman and amateur hypnotist, wrote in The Search for Bridey Murphy that many things which "Bridey" had told him in her Irish brogue were subsequently checked and verified, including obscure place names and obscure Gaelic words.

However, the Denver Post sent a reporter to Ireland to check details she related and he discovered names of streets given by Bridey never existed. There was no record of people she named and her geography was wrong.

The story of Bridey was dismissed.

Stevenson has studied reported cases of reincarnations for 20 years. He believes Mrs. Jay may actually have lived as Gretchen Gottlieb, citing her use of German.

"Language is a learned skill," he said. "Anyone who has ever tried to learn one knows that you must practice and practice."

In Bridey Murphy's case, skeptics suggested that she was reliving early childhood memories. Dr. Martin Orne, a University of Pennsylvania hypnosis expert, offers similar views on the Jay case.

"She must have been exposed to German at some point," Orne said. "There's no way she could have learned it any other fashion."

Both Jay and his wife are skeptics. "I have always believed that you have only one chance in this life," Mrs. Jay said. "I don't believe in reincarnation."

Gretchen Gottlieb's life was hardly notable despite her murder. And there are several towns and villages named Eneswalde in Germany although the most likely is considered to be one not far from Berlin in the heart of East Germany, a location which would make verification very difficult.

Jay believes that he and his wife have become involved in "a scientific venture which now has to be completed regardless of the consequences."

The couple, however, stopped the hypnotic interviews almost a year ago and Jay said there are no plans to resume.

WORDS OF LENIN BY THE VOLUME

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet professors are compiling a five-volume dictionary of all the words used by Vladimir Lenin, founder of the Soviet state.

The newspaper Sovietskaya Kultura said Tuesday the vocabulary of Lenin "is a major phenomenon in the history of the modern Russian literary language."

"The dictionary will list in alphabetical order all words that were in common use, without exception, in all their meanings as they were used by V.I. Lenin," the newspaper said.

The dictionary, it added, will be "an important aid to specialists in humanities and natural sciences, to ideological workers, lecturers and propagandists."

The Travelling Vicar Got Slightly Tipsy

LONDON (AP) — The Agatha Christie-like mystery had a plot as thick as the murder on the Orient Express.

It happened on the London to Brighton express Tuesday when alarmed passengers called in police to investigate the case of the vanishing vicar.

The passengers told police that a clergyman had disappeared from a first-class compartment in mysterious circumstances.

A young man on the train had been seen talking excitedly with the vicar as the train left London's Victoria Station.

During the hour-long journey, a train door was heard to slam.

Shortly after, the young man was seen walking along a train corridor carrying the vicar's black trilby hat, passengers attested.

Police seized the young man as he left the train at Brighton, dragging a heavy trunk.

The train was put out of service while police called in fingerprint experts and a search of the London-Brighton tracks was ordered.

But the plot crumbled 12 hours later when a porter at a station along the route told police of a slightly tipsy vicar he had seen leave the train and climb aboard another, taking him back to London.

The suspect, a 24-year-old computer programmer who would not give his name, was released.

"The police thought I pushed the padre out of the train, but I'm certainly glad they believed my story," he told reporters.

He said he was taking the trunk to Brighton for a friend and got involved in a heated discussion with the vicar about religion as they both waited for trains at Victoria Station. When he boarded the Brighton train, the vicar came with him, meaning to get off before it departed.

"He had been drinking and we were so engrossed in our conversation that we did not notice when the train started," said the young man. "The padre said not to worry, he would get off at the first stop. But he left his hat behind and I kept it, thinking I would hand it in to the lost property office at Brighton."

Police later traced the vicar and found him safe and sound, said a spokesman for Brighton police.

Silent Goddess of Blood Throne

KATMANDU, Nepal—She sits on a golden throne as the priest washes her feet, a seven-year-old goddess accepting her due.

"Only a goddess can sit on that throne," the priest says.

"We believe that if another child sits on the throne, it will vomit blood."

Katmandu's Maiden Goddess has graced the throne in a downtown temple for the last four years.

"She has inner strength," said the priest, Kesab Man Karamacharya.

"She is not a child like other children. She sits on the throne and she doesn't talk and she doesn't cry. It is very unusual for a child of that age."

Along with other tots from the priestly Bajracharya family, the little goddess was closeted four years ago in a dark room containing sarifices to the gods.

Despite the dark and the incantations from a priest, she didn't cry, qualifying her as Maiden goddess according to ancient Nepalese Hindu tradition.

She discarded her given name and moved into her temple beside the former royal palace at one end of Katmandu's main street.

It will be her home until she reaches puberty unless she cries or bleeds before then.

"Sometimes she plays, sometimes she reads, sometimes she eats," said the 70-year-old temple nanny who has looked after the last seven goddesses.

The nanny, Indra Maya, allows her grandchildren play with the goddess sometimes. Parental visits also are allowed. But Karmacharya said maiden goddess' mother and father worship her like other devout patrons of the temple.

When her time is up, the present Maiden Goddess will return to her village and try to lead a normal life, he said.

But maiden goddesses often end up old maids because men fear life with a former deity, added.

VANDERHOOF — It was Christmas all over again for four Vanderhoof boys who finally became official owners of $1,240 they found in September, 1973, on a municipal dump. Tod Millard, 8, John Thiessen, 11, Malcolm Evans, 13 ,and Danny Wiebe, 11, said they had no definite plans for spending their $310 shares. The money probably would be placed in a bank, they added.

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A mother who gave birth to 10 babies in 10 months says she may take a fertility drug again because she doesn't want her single surviving sextuplet to be an only child. On Dec. 8, Mrs. Charlotte Lange became the mother of sextuplets, five of whom died. Earlier she bore quadruplets, none of whom survived.

NEW YORK — Patricia Hearst "can come back and be Jane Fonda if she likes," says her mother. A former schoolmate of the kidnapped heiress-turned-revolutionary writes in the February issue of McCall's magazine that Mrs. Hearst is ready to accept her daughter's beliefs if she surrenders. "Where does she go from here?" Mrs. Hearst is quoted as asking in a story written by Leslie Redlich. "There is no more SLA (Symbionese Liberation Army). She can't carry on a revolution alone."

ANGERED by what he considered brusque action by a court in southern France Tuesday industrialist Louis Sacre, 61, cut off part of his ear. Sacre, an industrialist, had earlier accused the court of not hearing his side of the story of his bankruptcy action.

Besieged Cambodia A Fool's Paradise?

PHNOM PENH (WP) — As the Communist offensive against this city continues, the main mystery is: Why is everyone so confident? Are they living in a fool's paradise, or do they know something the rest of the world does not know?

Even before a Mekong river convoy was forced back last week, one experienced observer was describing the situation as the most serious he has ever seen.

"The war can only be won," he said, "by the man who is prepared to take big risks. The government must make a gamble by committing a division and all its armor, with full artillery and air support, in order to reopen Highway 1 and end the threat to the Mekong.

"Every day that they delay," he added, "the Khmer Rouge are able to entrench themselves one foot deeper, making it correspondingly more difficult to dislodge them. It takes a direct hit by a 500-pound bomb to destory a well-made bunker."

The trouble seems to be either that the government does not have sufficient forces for such an operation, or that it lacks transportation to bring troops in quickly from the provincial capitals — which are at present enjoying comparative peace.

Eighteen miles east of Phnom Penh, two battalions of 600 very glum soldiers are sitting along Highway 1, holding the line against the Khmer Rouge. Initially, their commander said, they were facing one regiment of Khmer Rouge, or about 1,000 men. This week, however, they had received information that a second rebel regiment had crossed the Mekong and taken up positions in front of them. The government commander had been ordered to draw back his troops and consolidate his position.

The government may not lack manpower, but it is certainly short of the elite troops it used so succesfully during last year's attack on Phnom Penh. The brunt of the war has traditionally been borne by several crack brigades which have been moved from front to front as the need arose.

One of these, the 80th Brigade, is now holded up at Oudong north of the capital, and would not be brought out of this strategic area even if that were physically possible, which is doubtful. Another elite brigade, the 20th, which fought on Phnom Penh's southern front last year and then during the siege of Kampot, is now engaged at Nek Luong, the important river crossing east of Phnom Penh that is the scene of this week's firecest fighting. The remainder of the best troops are all tied up around Phnom Penh itself, and could not be moved to Highway 1 without leaving the capital vulnerable. Although they are making some progress in the fighting here, some of these units are considerably understrength.

One of the battalions operating on the east bank of the Mekong has only 150 men left. More than 120 have been wonded or killed, 7 are listed as deserters, 43 as "absent."

The U.S. embassy is believed to want to get the stalled Mekong convoy through to Phnom Penh even if the situation continues to deteriorate along the river. It was the embassy that cancelled the convoy Jan. 5, on security grounds, according to U.S. embassy sources. But now the embasy appears willing to risk pushing the ships through and taking "an acceptable level of losses." The question remains, however, whether an "acceptable level" for the embassy would be acceptable to the civilian crews of the ships.

Furthermore, it is not just a question of getting one convoy through. The problem is to return to the previous norm of six a month.

Estimates of Phnom Penh's reserves of supplies are varied. Three is probably less than 40 days' supply of rice, less than three week's supply of ammunition and civilian fuel. The capital consumes 750 tons of rice a day, and since the beginning of the offensive the army has been using an estimated 500 tons of ammunition and 300 tons of fuel daily.

In the opinion of non-U.S. diplomatic sources, an airlift would be impossible.

Meanwhile the Khmer Rouge, from the mile-long strip of river bank they occupy east of the Mekong, can watch Phnom Penh going about its daily busines.

Presumably they are waiting for the day when their noose finally strangles the capital and they can move in.

ANTIBIOTIC SLAMMED

WASHINGTON (WP) — A widely prescribed antibiotic called clindamycin has caused more than 15 deaths since 1969 and should be limited immediately to use by hospitals for serious illnesses, Ralph Nader's Health Research Group told the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

The FDA acknowledged that it has records of nine deaths clearly associated with the drug and five with a parent drug, lincomycin.

(A spokesman for a mayor pharmaceutical firm in Victoria said both drugs are used locally, lincomycin probably more than clindamycin, but that neither is used extensively.)

A spokesman said an FDA advisory committee will meet Jan. 27 to consider the problem and hear from officials of Upjohn Co., the drugs' maker.

Both drugs will also be the subject of Jan. 28-29 hearings by the Senate monopoly subcommittee headed by Sen. Gaylord W. Nelsin, (Dem-Wis.). Expert witnesses are expected to agree with a charge by Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of the Health Research Group, that doctors are commonly giving the drugs for minor illnesses. But an Upjohn official Thursday denied it.

Wolfe said that in 1973 doctors filed 6 million prescriptions for clindamycin whose trade name is Cleocin.

Donors Line Up To Bleed

Blood donors jammed a Red Cross clinic in Victoria again Tuesday, giving 304 units of blood and setting what appears to be a record for a local two-day clinic of 569.

Average clinic in recent years has drawn about 115 donors but a critical blood shortage earlier this month has spurred people to turn out.

Spokesman Jerry Savage said today the crowd produced for the second day line-ups and waits of up to 1½ hours.

"It was eally a tremendous clinic," he said.

People who could not wait in line-ups Monday evening said they would return Tuesday "and they were as good as their word."

Next blood donor clinics in Victoria will be a February. A week-long series will start Feb. 17.

Record U.S. Benefit Claims Point to Big Jump in Jobless

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A record 970,200 Americans filed for unemployment insurance for the first time in the week ending Jan. 11, the U.S. government reported today.

The report reflects an expected large increase in the nation's January unemployment rate, which will be announced Feb. 7.

The jobless rate stood at 7.1 per cent in Deeember an estimated 6.5 million people.

The labor department said today that in the week ending Jan. 4 a record 4,627,200 persons were already receiving unemployment insurance benefits.

The next week, an additional 970,200 persons filed claims for the first time, also a record high.

The previous high was the last week in December when 813,400 filed initial claims.

Meanwhile, President Ford Tuesday signalled his determination to press forward, despite opposition in Congress, with his tax and energy programs and to put into effect a higher tax on oil imports as scheduled Feb. 1.

At a news conference, Ford maintained his opposition to gasoline rationing, declaring that he would veto a rationing program if Congress voted it.

The President turned down Democratic proposals that he delay the start of higher duties on imported oil for 90 days and said he would sign a proclamation this week to put "in motion the most important and far-reaching energy conservation program in our nation's history."

"I will not sit by and watch the nation continue to talk about an energy crisis and do nothing about it," he said.

"Nor will I take halfway measures which fail to change the direction that has put our nation in this position."

Pacemaker Saves Life

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A pacemaker has been implatend in the heart of a newborn baby, called by a hospital spokesman one of the youngest patients ever to receive the battery-powered life sustainer.

"It's just been one miracle after the other down there at the hospital," said the father, Clay Dixon. "Ten years ago she would have died. I never would have imagined a thing like this could happen."

A temporary pacemaker was implanted in the heart of Alisa Marie Dixon during exploratory surgery on Jan. 11, the day after she was born. A day later she received the permanent one.

"I'm sure Alisa is one of the youngest ever to get a pacemaker," said Karen Krantz, a spokesman for the Long Beach Memorial Hospital children's medical centre.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is an established convention that when your partner opens a king against a suit contract, and you play your queen on his king, your play demands that he underlead his ace at trick two. Hence, it should be appreciated that when you give this most drastic signal, you will have the queen and jack in your possession.

Here is an example of this defensive convention in action.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♠ 7 5
♥ 8 3
♦ A Q J 9 3
♣ K Q J 4

WEST
♠ 8 4
♥ A K 7 5 2
♦ 7 6 2
♣ 7 5 3

EAST
♠ K 9 3
♥ Q J 9
♦ 10 5

SOUTH
♠ A Q J 10 6 2
♥ 10 6 4
♦ K 8 4
♣ 9

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♥.

On West's lead of the heart king, East put up the queen. To trick two, West led the deuce of hearts, East's jack winning. To trick three East cashed the ace of clubs. To trick four, East played his nine of hearts, South followed with the ten, West covered with the ace, and dummy trumped.

Dummy's remaining trump was now led, and declarer put up his queen when East played the three. The finesse won, but eventually declarer had to concede a trump trick to East's king of trumps.

East planned the defence gorgeously. He perceived that if declarer were able to lead trumps twice from dummy, he would be able to take two successful finesses against East's twice-guarded king. But if dummy were forced to expend one of its two trumps by ruffing, then declarer would be able to finesse against East's king but once. So East made sure of first cashing the defenders' three tricks, and then leading a third heart, forcing dummy to ruff.

If East had played the nine-spot (instead of the queen) on West's opening lead of the heart king, West would probably have cashed the heart ace at trick two. And if he then led a diamond (rather than a club), declarer would have been able to reach dummy twice (via the diamond suit) to take two finesses against East's king of trumps.

Actually, declarer would then have made 11 tricks, since he would have later discarded his ten of hearts and nine of clubs on dummy's fourth and fifth diamonds. But East's play of the heart queen on the opening lead doomed declarer to defeat.

Turkey Warns On Aid Cutoff

ANKARA (AP) — Turkey will impose sanctions against American military bases if the U.S. Congress insists on halting arms aid to this NATO-member country, Turkey's defence minister said Monday.

Ilhami Sancar, in presenting his ministry's budgetary statement to a Turkish National Assembly committee, said: "Such a U.S. decision may also adversely affect the whole range of bilateral accords."

President Ford vetoed a bill last December calling for an end to American arms supplies to Turkey and Congress set a Feb. 5 deadline to allow for "initiation of negotiations on the Cyprus question."

Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in heaven we will meet again.

Wide Variety Marks Begonias

Begonias come in many forms, some so dissimilar they are not easily recognized by the owner as members of the same genus. Two species however are familiar to most gardeners as indoor pot plants or as outdoor bedding plants in summer.

One, with tuberous roots has the huge beautifully symmetrical blooms in rich colors all summer; the other, fibrous rooted, at the opposite end of the size scale, with dozens of small flowers at almost any season if the plants are brought indoors.

Apart from these well known flowering species, begonias are grown mostly for their ornamental foliage.

Native to high altitudes in Bolivian jungles, begonias do little growing below 60 degs. F. (15 C.) so that dormant tubers will winter for us without harm if stored above frost (0 deg. C.) but well below the 60 degs. F. (15 degs. C.) point.

While in growth, the native habitat again gives us clues as to requirements in soil and environment.

Jungle soil is rich in all plant foods from the decay of masses of different kinds of plants which gain roothold in tree crotches and on branches. Bird and animal decay and droppings make rich additions to the leafmould. Shade from hot sun, combined with humidity, for most of the year encourage the strange silvery and white foliage we admire on many of the Rex begonias.

The Rex hybrids createl as much excitement in Europe over a hundred years ago as the striped tulips did in Holland.

The colors of the leaves may be beautifully harmonious with traces of mauve, areas of pink or rose with silver splashes, or bizarre with creamy white leaves veined with deep crimson.

Leaves follow the shape of the dark green tuberous summer blooming begonia we all know, or they may be much cut and sharply pointed. The colors are at their best when grown in a shaded, warm and humid atmosphere.

Other begonias are grown here as house plants in the winter. They may have thick, jointed stems, upright in habit and bearing smooth or densely hairy leaves, green on the top surface, red below.

Hairy species have hairy stems, but the flowers are similar in both kinds. They are not showy by comparison with those we know better, but are intricately designed with the seedpod very noticeable.

Foliage development in these grown for leaf coloring is improved if all flower buds are removed when first noticed, though they are attractive enough in drooping clusters of pink, rose or white.

These jointed begonias are very tall growing in their jungle environment, so that as house plants they should either be made to branch early in life or be constantly renewed by taking the tops as cuttings to be rooted in a sandy leafmould.

Names are difficult to establish among the 500 or more begonia species, for natural and commercial hybridizing has been extensive.

Remember to give leafmould and some sand for drainage; a temperature between 60 and 65 degs. F. (15 to 19 deg. C.) to start growth; shade for all (except little Begonia semperflorens which takes full sun in beds outdoors); and a fairly moist atmosphere when temperatures are high. Begonias are lovely and useful indoors and out when well grown.

Robbery Foils Widow's Dreams

VANCOUVER (CP)—Four young boys—one "not more than 12 years old"—snatched a purse containing $500—the money a 60-year-old widow had saved to bring her daughter from Poland to Canada for a visit.

Jean Krzyzanowski, speaking through an interpreter said after her husband died she set aside part of her $600-a-month cook's wages to buy airplane tickets for her children, who remained in Poland when the elder Krzyzanowskis left seven years ago.

She has brought her two other children to Canada for short visits but has not seen her daughter in seven years.

She was returning home with the money after withdrawing it from her bank account when her purse was snatched.

"One of the boys came running at me — he wasn't any more than 12 years old," Mrs. Krzyzanowski said.

"He pulled at my purse. I tried to pull back but he grabbed it from me and ran. I chased after him, then three more boys all ran up to join him and they all ran away."

VANDER ZALM

Homes Report Hit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said Tuesday it isn't the fault of municipalities that housing costs are soaring.

Vander Zalm rejected the claims of a recent United Way report which blamed municipal red tape for substantially increasing housing costs.

New Westminster Mayor Muni Evers, chairman of the Greater Vancouver Regional District Housing committee, agreed, saying the claims were a "bunch of hogwash."

The Surrey mayor blamed both federal and provincial governments for not providing any incentive for municipalities to provide new housing.

"Right now the only way to survive as a municipality under the present system is to stop growth completely," he said.

Because the per capita grant to municipalities is low, Vander Zalm said newcomers have to pay high subdivision costs so that existing residents are not penalized.

Vander Zalm also blamed real estate speculators for pushing up the price of land.

"It's not the fault of the municipalities that people have been chased into a fury by big realtors and that land selling for a few thousand dollars a few years ago is now selling for $15,000 to $20,000," he said.

SALMON ARM (CP) — A proposal by CP Rail to add new track in this area of south central British Columbia could produce environmental damage, a soil specialist with B.C.'s environment and land use secretariat told a public hearing Tuesday.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal has been asked by 37 insurance companies to set aside a B.C. Supreme Court ruling that upheld the provincial government automobile insurance monopoly.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A motion to eliminate interest payments on the first installment of property taxes was defeated Tuesday by city council.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city's 3,000 teachers decided Tuesday to omit a group dental plan from their 1975 contract with the school board. The teachers voted to ask for a 16.3-per-cent increase, rather than a 15.6 increase with the dental plan.

CLEARWATER (CP) — Bill Mattenly, chairman of the Clearwater Improvement District said Tuesday the community will be cut in half until a new bridge is built to replace one destroyed last week.

Strike Vote On

BURNABY (CP) — Some 400 staff members at the British Columbia Institute of Technology are holding a strike vote today because of what spokesman Pat Thomas claims is "footdragging" by negotiators for the board of governors.

The faculty members voted last November to hold study sessions if necessary, to back their demands for a contract settlement. But Thomas said Tuesday the B.C. Labor Code indicates a strike vote is needed. It will be some time next week before results of the strike vote will be made public, he added.

BOOST FORECAST FOR HALIBUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chairman of the International Pacific Halibut Commission says there is hope for an increase in halibut production in North Pacific waters, despite the fact that 1974 production was its lowest in more than 60 years.

C. R. Levelton said Japanese and Russian fishing interests are willing to reduce their encroachments on the halibut stocks in the Gulf of Alaska and Bering Sea.

He told the commission during its annual meeting that the steady decline in the nursery stock of halibut in northern waters has been attributed to foreign trawlers catching young fish.

Bernard Skud, eommission director, said 21 million pounds of halibut were landed in 1974, compared with 70 million pounds 12 years ago.

Japan had agreed to a 5½-month closure of its trawl fishery in the southeastern Bering Sea during 1975 and would restrict its trawling in the Gulf of Alaska, he added.

Treatment Replaces Jail Term

In an unusual move in county court Monday, the prosecution joined defence counsel in applying for a suspended sentence in the case of Charles Edwin Walker who pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine for the purposes of trafficking.

Crown counsel Mike Hutchison said he supported the motion so that Walker could continue receiving psychiatric treatment.

He told Judge M. L. Tyrwhitt-Drake that the accused would probably have had a defence if he had pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity, but had chosen to plead guilty instead.

The charge against Walker was laid last March 3 after Sidney RCMP found five ounces of cocaine in his truck. The drug had a street value of $5,000.

Hutchison noted the drug was being brought to Victoria from the mainland and conceded Walker was merely "aiding" the actual courier. The accused's involvement, he said, was only a "technical one."

Drake agreed to the request for suspended sentence and placed Walker on three years probation with the stipulation he continues receiving psychiatric treatment.

Also in Judge Drake's court, Roger Lindal was sentenced to 18 months in jail for breaking and entering and theft. Lindal had been found guilty of the charge laid last July 23 when he appeared before judge and jury Dec. 16. The judge had put over sentencing for a presentence re-

Houseboat Tax Evades Esquimalt

The West Bay Marina controversy sailed into Esquimalt council considerations Monday, but slipped away again before Ald. Larry Mann could slap a tax on houseboats.

Council defeated Mann's motion to petition the province for "enabling legislation for assessment and taxation of houseboats and live-aboards at marinas."

"If we had jurisdiction we would have had them out of there already," said Mayor Art Young, "but we don't have any jurisdiction."

Council has forwarded its disapproval of houseboats at the Head Street marina to the federal government, responsible for all foreshore property below the high-tide mark.

Ald. Ken Hill said Mann's motion was "contrary" to the motion already put to the federal government.

And Ald. Jim McEvay argued that if council favored the motion, "it would mean council was in favor of the houseboats" when really they are a fire hazard, cause pollution and prompted many complaints from area residents.

City 'Slave Trade' Ring Broken

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Immigration officials in Victoria have broken up a covert ring that aimed at bringing East Indians into Canada illegally and then indenturing them to agents here in what one official has described as "a form of slave trade."

Doug Cook, officer-in-charge of the Victoria immigration office, told the Times Tuesday, his department monitored arrivals at Victoria International airport from Dec. 20 to Jan. 20 after learning of the operation.

During that time 25 people, mostly young married men, all from the Punjab, were identified as participants in the international immigrant smuggling scheme.

Twelve of their number have since been deported, Cook said. Some cases are pending, while others —who have blood relatives living in Canada — have been permitted to remain for a three-month visit but only after posting cash bonds of between $300 and $1,500 guaranteeing their departure.

Cook said the 25 arrived in Victoria at various times throughout the month by plane from Seattle — the final leg of a flight which originated in New Delhi and stopped over in London, England and Seattle.

When they landed they said they were en route to visit relatives in Toronto.

However, immigration officials believed that was just a ruse to gain entry into the country. (Through Commonwealth ties no visa is required for an Indian visiting Canada but the visitor must have a return ticket out of the country and limit his stay to three months.)

Cook said the object was work, generally available in west coast or interior B.C. sawmills.

He said a travel agency in Vancouver operated by an Indian whom he declined to name, is believed responsible for setting up the scheme, but no charges have been laid.

The agent, said Cook, charged each of the illegal immigrants a fee which ranged upwards from three times the cost of the $1,200 return air fare.

"A figure of $10,000 is an often bruited sum, but frankly we don't know for sure," he said.

Officials feel the persons would have been indentured for life . . . unless they were able to scrape together enough money to buy a passage back home.

"It is a form of slave trade operating right under our noses," Cook said. "It is nothing new to Canada . . . it's been done by the Chinese, the Portuguese, the Greek and Italians, too."

Cook said the Indian organizers had used Victoria as a "test area" and must have known of the staff limitations at the airport where normally only one immigration officer is on duty each shift.

He said the arrivals were purposefully set to coincide with the influx of travellers over the busy holiday period with the expectation the immigration screenin would not be so careful.

Those engaged in the scheme were "victims of the system" possessed by the bright hope of vast wealth by Indian standards, Cook suggested.

A typical case, said Cook, was that of a young man in his mid-20's who left behind a wife and three children on the family farm in the Punjab. He told the immigration official he had come here for a visit because he had "heard about the beauties of Canada" and wanted to see them for himself.

Suspicions were aroused when it was calculated the man's air fare was equivalent to his total earnings over the past 10 years.

Cook said many of the Indians claimed they were going to visit a brother in Toronto.

"When we checked the information we discovered the brother they were talking about was a village or cousin "brother," and not any kind of brother we had ever known of."

Cook said the illicit scheme is still under investigation but that this much is known or believed to have happened:

—That an agent left from Canada and arrived in Dehli where he placed an advertizement in the local papers asking innocently "Are you interested in visiting Canada? I will help you get there."

—That the candidates were referred to an Indian travel agency. Immigration officials have traced 15 reservations to the same agency in old Delhi.

—That tickets for Pan American flights out of Delhi were arranged for the candidates.

—and that, because money cannot be take out of India legally, cash deposits were set up for teh participants to pick up in either London or Seattle.

Cook said the cost to each individual varied "with whatever the market would stand."

He said though the candidate was ostensibly issued a return air ticket in compliance with Canadian visitor requirements there was some suspicion among officials here

'UFOs' JAYCEE TARGET

Unsightly Flag Offenders beware — the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce is after you.

The Jaycees have initiated a new project intended to track down all businesses whose Canadian or B.C. flag is in a tattered or torn condition.

If a Jaycee spots an unsightly flag offender (UFO), a letter will be sent asking the flag be replaced to give visiting tourists a better image of the city.

A flag may be sonsidered unsightly, according to the Jaycees, if it is (1) tattered (2) torn (3) faded (4) not flown in centre of group, or (5) other.

CIA 'Active In Alta.'

CALGARY (CP) — Bruce McGuinness, a Vancouver television producer, said Tuesday the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) is active in Alberta "gathering information about, and perhaps trying to influence the petroleum industry."

McGuinness, an independent producer, told radio station CFAC three persons were recruited in Alberta for CIA work by Virginio Gonzalez and "a Mr. Abbott." McGuinness formerly worked for the Calgary station.

McGuinness said earlier he was asked by Gonzalez and Abbott to watch the activities in Canada of John Meier, a former aide to recluse billionaire Howard Hughes, but he declined. He later learned from a reporter in New York that the two men were agents for the CIA.

McGuinness is a former scientific adviser to Hughes. He did not elaborate in the interview with CFAC about the CIA's alleged activities in Alberta.

A spokesman for Helen Hunley, Alberta solicitor-general, declined comment on McGuinness' statements.

Meanwhile, Harvie Andre, MP for Calgary Centre, said he wants some response from the federal government concerning McGuinness' claims.

He said it's possible the RCMP is aware of any CIA activities "but if their explanation is not sufficient, a full-fledged inquiry might well be in order."

GUN PLEA FROM A-G

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald has issued an appeal to merchants to tighten up security on the sale of guns.

B.C. has no plans to introduce legislation concerning the sale of firearms, MacDonald said in an interview today, but he added he hoped gun merchants would live up to the "necessities of modern society".

"I would hope that stores that sell rifles and shotguns and even hand guns would themselves tighten up security . . . lock up their stock overnight . . . and be more careful than they have been because of the sad situations in Vancouver and Calgary," he said.

The minister said, however, federal laws should be strengthened to require registration of either all weapons or all persons who own guns.

Guns are sold across the counter in stores like any other merchandise, he said, and this shouldn't be allowed.

Stores should ensure ammunition and guns are not easily stolen and should make sure weapons should not fall into the hands of minors, said Macdonald.

Macdonald said he believes all types of guns should be registered under federal law because statistics garnered from coroners' reports on the lower mainland show a majority of recent shooting murders have been done with shotguns rather than pistols or hand guns.

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance benefit payments for the first 11 months of 1974 were five per cent higher than for the same period in 1973, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday. The total to the end of November was $1.955 billion, up from $1.863 billion for the corresponding period in 1973.

Swiss Apply Penalty

LONDON (AP) — Swiss authorities announced today a penalty charge of 40 per cent on all funds newly deposited from abroad by non-residents after the United States dollar hit a record low against the Swiss franc in currency trading. The "negative interest" boost to 40 per cent from 12 annually was Switzerland's most radical move yet to halt the rush on the franc.

Fire Kills 51

MANILA (AP) — A fire swept a five-storey building in a Manila suburb today, killing at least 51 persons and seriously injuring at least 79, authorities said. It was the worst fire in Philippine history.

A strike by 280 city outside workers within the next few days appeared inevitable following a breakdown of mediation efforts this morning.

Greater Victoria municipalities and the school board have stated they will respond to any single strike action with a general lockout of all 1,736 employees.

Mediation officer Clark Gilmour said he will submit his report on the dispute to Labor Minister Bill King today.

Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing city outside workers, has already posted strike notice but cannot legally act until informed by King that Gilmour's report has been received.

A general lockout is not possible either until Gilmour has submitted reports on the other contract disputes.

Gilmour said that he is submitting his report only on the Local 50 dispute today. Asked if he is is submitting reports on the other CUPE contract disputes in Greater Victoria, he said the Local 50 report is "the only one today."

Municipal negotiator E. E. Pearlman said the city is not prepared to move in the direction of the Port Alberni settlement with CUPE and will hold to its 15.76 per cent wage increase offer for 1975.

Base rate for city outside workers is $4.42 per hour but to match Port Alberni, this would have to increase to $5.40 per hour by July 1 and in addition provide for cost of living increases. Port Alberni workers' latest increase was from $4.49 an hour.

CUPE staff representative Tom Smith said the union expects to hear from King Thursday or Friday that Gilmour's report has been received.

Asked if Local 50 will strike at once he said the decision has not been made as to when the union will strike.

STANLEY PARK DRUG SLAYING

VANCOUVER (CP)—A drug dealer known to police in the Yukon and British Columbia was stalked through the dark underbrush of Stanley Park Tuesday night by a gunman who shot him repeatedly as he tried to escape.

The 23-year-old victim, bleeding heavily from three wounds, reached the safety of a roadway in the park about 8:30 p.m. and flagged down a passing motorist.

His attacker gave up the hunt. However, the victim, whose name has not been released, died before an ambulance arrived and became the city's first murder victim for 1975.

The victim reportedly told the motorist he had been shot at five times.

Homicide detectives said today the man had a record for soft drugs in Whitehorse and Vancouver. However, his body indicated that when he died he was a heroin addict.

Police working with flashlights through the night found tire marks, footprints and a trail of blood that criss-crossed a wide area of the park.

Detectives said they believe that the victim had run and possibly tried to hide behind trees while trying to escape from his assailant.

Gunman Frees 3 Hostages

Times News Services

LONDON, Ont. — Police today handed over $10,000 and a pledge of safe escape to a gunman after he released three of four children he had held hostage for nearly 24 hours in a farmhouse at nearby Thamesford.

The three children were released shaken but unharmed at about 1:30 p.m. local time.

They were taken from the farmhouse by their father, George Field, 33, who had pleaded for their release with the gunman.

Within 30 minutes, police gave in to the gunman's demands for the money and a getaway car driven by an ex-convict friend.

"We are more interested in saving that kid's (remaining hostage) life, than in making any arrest," Ontario Provincial Police assistant commissioner J. L. Erskine said.

It was not immediately known whether the gunman had agreed to release his lone hostage, Robert Field, 12, before fleeing the scene.

Police earlier had said they would not meet the gunman's demands unless he released the hostages, held since about 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Det.-Insp. Dennis Alsop of the Ontario provincial police had earlier said the gunman might pose an even greater danger if allowed to leave the house with the hostages.

Insp. Alsop then said the four children — Donald, 11, Robert, 12, Kim, 7, and David, 4 — were all well and that police were checking them by phone periodically.

The gunman said in several telephone interviews during the night he had no intention of harming the children. He said repeatedly, "the only ones who can harm these children are the police."

Cline's mother who lives in another nearby community, New Sarum, said today that her son phoned her last night to say goodbye.

Mrs. Aaron Cline said she knew nothing about the incident until a woman phoned Tuesday night and said Wayne wanted to speak to her.

She told her son to give himself up.

"He said to me 'Mom, I've always wanted to die young,'" she said.

"I told Waynie . . . don't you hurt those children," Mrs. Cline said, "He said, 'Well, maybe they'll (the police) know how I'm hurt.'"

She said Wayne had known the children since they were babies and one of them, Donald Wayne, is named after him.

"Waynie went to live with George (the children's father) when he was only seven or eight years old," she said.

Cline also told Windsor, Ont., radio station CKLW today by phone that he believed his chances for survival were "not too good."

Asked if he planned to surrender, Cline said "never."

Gov't Applies News Muzzle on Knight Firing

Members of the education department's research and development staff have been told to keep quiet on the firing of the division's director Dr. Stanley Knight.

Seven members of the new division marched angrily into the office of education deputy Jack Fleming Tuesday and said they would voice their full support for Knight, who was dismissed last week.

They emerged nearly four hours later, however, saying they could not discuss any details of the meeting for fear of losing their jobs.

"We have been warned by . . . Fleming that we cannot disclose to the public of B.C. any matter concerning our meeting today, including the matter of support for the director Dr. Stanley Knight," said group spokesman Jean Burgess.

"If I disclose any such matters our jobs may be terminated under the terms of the oath of office."

Some of the division members are public servants who are still in their probationary period but others, hired as consultants, are not under the Public Service Commission.

Burgess said Fleming also warned them that the consultants, not bound by the oath of office, could also lose their jobs if they comment "on any aspect of this meeting."

Fleming would not divulge to the staff members or to the press the reasons behind Knight's dismissal.

The deputy has said from the start Knight's dismissal was a public service matter and since grievance procedures have been launched it would not be proper to discuss the reasons behind the action.

Dismissal came at the end of Knight's six-month probationary period which ends with a recommendation by the deputy for either dismissal or permanent appointment.

Knight was hired in July to set up the research and development division which was assigned to study the department's White Paper on educational change in B.C.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly has said the matter is purely one of personnel but the members of the division said Tuesday they still hope to meet with the minister to discuss the future of the group.

Fleming described the long meeting with staff members as involving a discussion of the future of the division.

An existing superintendent of the department will supervise the staff for the moment, he said, but a replacement for Knight will not be sought while his grievance is still pending.

Work will go on as usual with the group, he said, and Burgess confirmed that the members "want their jobs."

Knight has also asked Premier Barrett to intervene in the case but Barrett has said he has no intention of doing so.

War on Noise

How Do You Take an Obscene Parrot to Court? Struggle to Stifle Racket Dies With a Giggle

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Greater Victoria's attempt at drafting a uniform anti-noise bylaw for adoption by all area municipalities died in a legal jungle Tuesday. And the mourners merely laughed.

It was a jungle filled not only with booby traps and pitfalls but, metaphorically speaking with a nightmarish cacophony of sound — including the raucous mouthings of "obscene parrots," a vociferous seagul (aided and abetted by a nonagenarian bird lover), carillons endlessly playing classical music, rock-belting groups, barking dogs and crowing cocks.

But there was only one audible sound in the City Hall guffaws and giggles of aldermen as they read the execution order written by city solicitor Jakob de Villiers.

Rarely do memoranda from senior city officials indulge in any flights of humor, but on this occasion either de Villiers was in a frivolous mood or his basic script material was just too good to waste on the usual ponderous prose of bureaucracy.

At any rate, he used a combination of wry comment and sarcasm to convince city fathers that a noise bylaw can be a legal minefield — unless drafted with the utmost care — and that such legislation is difficult enough to enact with practical effect in the city, and to amend as necessary, without trying to make it relevant to all its municipal neighbors as well.

Cause of all the laughter was a detailed five-page letter from the city solicitor, commenting section by section on the draft of a proposed bylaw "for the abatement and control of objectionable noises," which the Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee had forwarded to member municipalities.

The draft was based on an existing city bylaw (not of de Villiers' authorship) but that didn't stop him from criticizing both the original and the copy.

As he noted in the preamble to his critique: "My general comment on the existing and the proposed bylaws is that they create rather than remove confusion by the bylaw a number of specific instances of violations, and that many of the exceptions bo the bylaw are obscure and in some cases illogical."

For example, de Villiers cited the draft's section 5: "No person shall harbour or keep any animal or bird which by causing frequent or loud noise disturbs the quiet, peace, rest, enjoyment, comfort or convenience of the neighborhood or of persons at or near the source of such sound or noise."

This section, the solicitor pointed out, had been copied from the city bylaw but without incorporating the amendment, which limits its application to caged birds.

He went on: "I presume that the section is aimed at barking dogs, crowing cocks and profane parrots. However, soon after the enactment of the city bylaw my department was called upon to prosecute a 93-year-old lady for feeding a seagull on her lawn, because the seagull vociferously expressed its appreciation of the food.

He recommended the section be deleted or — here, presumably, with tongue firmly in cheek — replaced by: "No person shall keep a dog that barks at night, a cock that crows at night or a parrot that uses loud and offensive language."

And in case anyone had not caught the point, he added: "I trust that the implications of this section are clearly understood, particularly as they would apply to rural areas and to pet lovers."

Another weakness in the bylaw, de Villiers said, was to be found in the list of noises that would be exempt from the bylaw's provisions.

For instance, the draft states that it would not apply to "any duly authorized parade or performance by a military or other band."

It was those last three words that had the city's legal advisor worried. They were "extremely wide" in possible interpretation, he said, and would "permit any group of citizens anywhere to form a band and play music."

Then again, another exception would give the freedom of the decibel range to "the use of bells or chimes by churches, and the use of carillons where such carillons have been lawfully erected."

But wait. Shouldn't that phrase be amended to stipulate the "reasonable use" of such bells and carillons?

De Villiers explained the need for recalling that his department has received complaints about bell-ringing churches.

"One church caused its bells to chime every half-hour, and used a sound amplification device." In that situation because electronic equipment was used "we were able to persaude the church that the exemption did not apply."

As for carillons, the draft bylaw's section didn't say by whom they were to be used.

De Villiers added: "There is presently pending a complaint against erection (which was presumably lawful) of a set of carillons in a private neighborhood. The neighbors complained that this gentleman is sounding his carillons, sometimes every quarter of an hour.

"Apparently he has a mechanical device for activating the carillons, and he forces his taste of music (which happens to be good!) upon he unwilling ears of his neighbors.

"Should this be exempted from the noise bylaw, and on what grounds of policy? Why should the noisy playing of rock music be prohibited but the noisy playing of classical music be permitted? And why should either type of music be permitted simply because the instrument used is a carillon?"

Sources at City Hall said later no complaints have been received concerning rock-playing carillons.

De Villiers said he assumed the exemption was intended to legalize the carillons at the Provincial Museum, but argued that same result could be achieved by using powers under the Municipal Act to make different regulations or prohibitions for different areas of the municipality.

"However, as soon as this is done the regional uniformity of the bylaw goes out of the window," he stated.

$500,000 CBC Offer Accepted

The city of Victoria has written accepting a $500,000 offer from the CBC for a parcel of city-owned land on the west side of Blanshard, city manager Jim Bramley confirmed today.

Bramley said city council has approved the CBC's proposal but the deal won't be concluded until council has formally ratified the matter and the land has been surveyed.

The property, bounded by Blanshard, Hill, Ross Lane and Kings, behind the Victoria Press Ltd. building, is residual land left after completion of the Blanshard urban renewal project some years ago. The city had invited tenders for its commercial development.

No details of CBC plans for the site were available from a Vancouver spokesman for the broadcasting authority, but unconfirmed reports said it will be developed as both a television and radio station — a project costing upwards of $9 million.

Victoria is the only provincial capital lacking a CBC station.

Mayor Peter Pollen said Tuesday the city had received no indication what type of building the CBC would erect, nor when construction would begin. The failure to provide such information was "rather typical" of the CBC's attitude, he said.

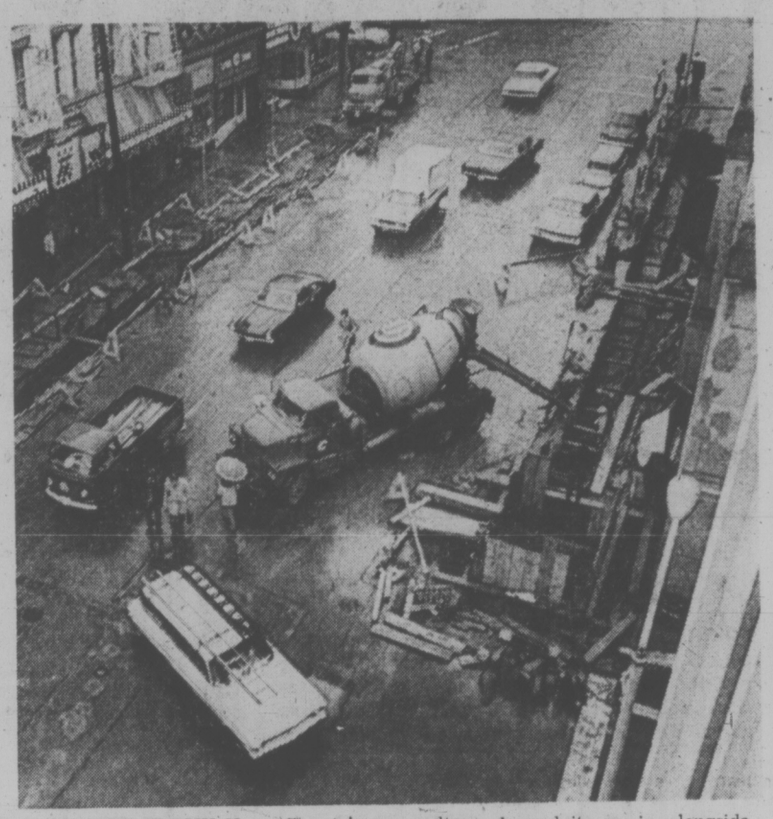
Pollen criticized CBC television as "one of the horrors of Canadian broadcasting," with its heavy reliance on American serials and commercials.

Of greater benefit to the city, he said, would be a CBC radio station and a television station with programming similar to Seattle's Channel 9.

But Ald. Malcolm Anderson today took Pollen to task for his criticisms, saying the mayor was entitled to his personal views but he should have made it clear that they were not generally shared by his council colleagues.

"We as a council are happy to see them there," he said. "Nothing is to be gained by gratuitous insults about the CBC — which are really so corny and old hat that the rest of council really aren't interested in such remarks."

Anderson said the price agreed for the property was "slightly below market price," but council felt it was worth it to ensure a good use for the land.



TRENCHES FLANK Yates Street in the 600-block these days and it's something of a battle getting through. The concrete pours, the pedestrians wander and the motorists fume as B.C. Hydro vaults and conduits go in alongside Post Office and across the street. It's not a new story. Gas service was replaced on north side last year. (John McKay photo.)

Long-Time Band Leader Dies at 70

Funeral service will be held Friday for Len Acres, well known local dance orchestra leader who died Tuesday at the age of 70.

Acres and his orchestra played for years in the Crystal Gardens, at the Empress Hotel, and for balls and dance parties.

He played at government House during the regimes of nine lieutenant-governors from Randolph Bruce to George Pearkes.

Born in England, Acres came to Victoria at age 16.

He used to play music at silent movies, then went to work in the music deparment of David Spencer's Store and later took up orchestra work.

Acres also taught piano lessons for many years.

He is survived by his wife Jean, at their home at 2322 Beach Drive.

His brothers Albert and Fred and sisters Lillian Watson and Marge Knight also survive him.

Funeral will be at Sands Memorial Chapel of Chimes Friday at 1 p.m., Rev. Laura Butler officiating.

Pulp Carrier Leaves Tonight

The first pulp carrier to tie up at Ogden Point this year leaves at 9 tonight.

She's the Ascona, one of the few ships registered in landlocked Switzerland.

This is the third trip to the west coast for the four-year-old ship. She will load 1,400 tons of pulp before setting out for Europe.

Victoria was a port of call for her twice in 1974.

PCB Flashes All-Clear On Swan Lake Pollution

Swan Lake has been given a clean bill of health by the B.C. Pollution Control Board.

Tests on the dissolved oxygen content of the lake monitored eight parts per million throughout the lake.

Saanich municipal engineer Cliff Warren said the PCB inspectors told him "the lake has returned to an aerobic state (no more odors)."

Residents and those driving by the lake area have complained for years about the smell of gases generated by the polluted lake.

"Now the people around the area will be able to get rid of their clothespins!" Warren quipped.

Tests taken late in 1974 showed pollution had killed stocks of cutthroat trout and other fish that once inhabited the lake.

Now the pollution problem appears to have been almost licked, the fish and other life could be expected to return to the lake, Warren said.

"Now the gases are no longer existent the lake can support aquatic life," he said.

The only question remaining, Warren added, was the amount of sediment that had settled on the bottom of the lake and its possible effects.

"We will continue to do some bottom sampling," he said, "to see if whether, in the warmer weather, there will be any chemical reaction to Chief culprit in the pollution of the lake has been Saanich municipality. cause problems."

Much of the pollution dumped in the lake was from the Willow-McBriar treatment plant at the municipal yard.

The plant was phased out in late December when the new sewer extension in the Blenkinsop area was activated.

Aldermen Seek City Branch For Rentalsman

To end the "chaotic" situation involving Victoria-area complaints to the Vancouver office of the B.C. Rentalsman, the city's housing committee recommended Tuesday that Victoria make office space available for a local branch of the provincial agency.

Aldermen were told that Victoria residents seeking information on landlord-tenent matters experience difficulties in contacting the Vancouver office, which has only 20 telephones serving the entire province.

Even when contact is established, said a staff report, the rentalsman's investigator usually has no knowledge of the Victoria situation.

The report said the only processing system at present involves monthly visits by the deputy rentalsman, and the use on a fee-for-service basis of Basil Wallace, former manager of the municipally-funded Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau which was wound up last October.

But Wallace, who has to work out of his own home, is required to handle investigations "from Nanaimo south."

To underline aldermen's complaints of the inadequacy of this system, committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier said in one month alone last year Wallace's LTAB handled 788 calls in the Greater Victoria area.

"Let's notify the provincial government that the current state of the rentalsman's office is chaotic as far as it applies to Victoria," suggested Ald. Mike Young.

The offer of office space arose after the committee heard that Rentalsman Barrie Clark has an inadequate budget to afford such an establishment in the city.

CONTRACT AWARDED ON MALL

Extra cost risks notwithstanding, Victoria city council agreed Tuesday to award the contract for construction of the Government Street Mall so that work can start as planned later this month.

Earlier Tuesday, the Central Area development committee had talked of a likely delay for the project, due to the possibility that a threatened strike by municipal employees could result in the mall work being picketed and held up for three or four months.

The matter was discussed again at an in-camera meeting of council's caucus, and a source said today it was decided to give the go-ahead "because if we didn't bite the bullet now we just wouldn't proceed."

The $566,056 contract was awarded to the low bidder, Capital City Construction Ltd.

Win a Prize—For 'Coming Back to Life'

So life's feeling a bit flat and meaningless lately, eh?

Well, here's a remedy. Go surfing. Borrow a homemade hollow surfboard with a hole in it and tackle the winter waves at Jordan River. Get swept out to sea and, when the board fills with water and sinks, grab a log and then another log, lash them together with kelp and cling to them all night and more. And then, 19 hours after it all began, or thereabouts, after drifing some 20 miles, be found still alive, floating on a bed of seaweed.

Sound a bit extreme to you? Then let life stay flat and meaningless.

But, although it was quite unintentional, that's what Victoria's Jim Hilborn did — and he can recommend it.

A 17-year-old high school student now back at Mount Douglas after a year attending Shawnigan Lake Boys' School, Jim went missing Sunday, Dec. 29, while surfing with friends and was plucked from the icy water late the following day after an extensive air-sea search.

"It's good for people to have this sort of thing happen to them occasionally," says Jim and he adds rather poetically: "Then they get prizes for coming back to life."

And Jim's prizes?

"Well, the whole thing has made me appreciate things more, luxuries, people," he says. "When the board wouldn't support me any more and I could see the storm coming, I could see myself at my own funeral. I could see people I knew there, too."

★

'I could see that for about half an hour," Jim went on. "That was a long half hour, I can tell you. I guess that's the half hour I learned most about life and about myself.

"I realized suddenly that I had been taking a lot of things for granted and I kept telling myself, if I pull out of this I would appreciate life more and not take everything for granted." Then a smile spreads across Jim's face and he adds: "Although, I guess I will be the same as I always was."

"While I was ut there clinging to that log, I learned a lot of things about people and about myself, Jim says seriously. "Like I wasn't afraid of dying, because I wasn't panicking. My first thought was about my mother, because she had a stroke about three years ago and I thought if I died . . then it would finish her off."

Jim Hilborn lives in a beautiful home with sweeping views over Cedar Hill golf course. Next year he plans to return to Shawnigan Lake School and later go on to university to try for a degree in business administration. And one day he will take over the family business, Oakland Industries, a fish-packing firm of which his father Bill Hilborn is president.

Apart from that, though, Jim is your average teenager. He lounges in a chair and gazes out of the window but seems to be staring into space; he wears a bulky sweather and torn blue jeans and his face has its share of pimples; and Elton John, singing of what "the papers have got to say about teenage blues," has to be toned down a little so we can talk.

And like most young people, to Jim danger and a brush with death are not too serious. In fact, he admits he has been laughing most of the time about the fuss people have made.

A cold water survival expert said at the time Jim's ordeal would have killed most people. But he shrugs and says he thinks most people could do it if they had to.

The whole adventure didn't even have a serious beginning.

"We were just sitting around here with nothing to do and one of the guys had seen a picture in the Times of someone surfing at Jordan River," Jim explains. "So we said let's try it. And we did."

Jim's a qualified scuba diver (he learned at Shawnigan Lake School) and he skis but he had never been surfing before.

"I haven't been yet either," he laughs, "for I never did get up. It's harder than it looks."

And he laughs about the serious reaction of others.

"Like, the Vancouver Sun phoned me and wanted to come and take a picture of me surfing," says Jim. "And I told them sorry, but I can't surf and they were pretty disappointed. I guess they could see a bit of money floating away."

Jim's attitude didn't stop him from accepting a trip to Toronto to be interviewed for the quiz show "Front Page Challenge" though. (He is expected to appear on Tuesday, Jan. 28, at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 2).

"I'd been laughing all the way through about people making a big deal out of this, but I wasn't going to say no," he smiled. "And my bill for just two nights at the Hyatt Regency came to $125."

Jim has been flooded with fan mail and he has all the letters and cards stuck neatly into a scrap book.

There's a nice letter from H. C. Wilkinson, headmaster at Shawnigan Lake School, praising Jim's courage.

There's another from a man in Cassiar, B.C., likening Jim to himself and saying that he, too, had "got out of several situations mostly intact, sometimes with holes in my skin." He urged Jim to take care.

"And there's this one from a Jesus Freak urging me to thank God and accept Christ as my saviour," says Jim, holding the letter out.

But the best is from a girl in Saskatchewan, who says she wrote it 20 minutes before midnight on New Year's Eve and signed her name with the prefix "your unknown friend" although she obviously doesn't want to stay that way.

"You're cute," she tells Jim after having seen his picture in a Saskatoon paper.

She described herself as "five feet, eight inches, long light-brown hair, hazel green eyes, not fat, not skinny" and said she would like to get to know Jim better.

"I'm going to answer that one," he says with a grin.

"Well, I mean, why not? You never know when I might be in Saskatchewan!"

City 'Slave Trade' Ring Broken

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Immigration officials in Victoria have broken up a covert ring that aimed at bringing East Indians into Canada illegally and then indenturing them to agents here in what one official has described as "a form of slave trade."

Doug Cook, officer-in-charge of the Victoria immigration office, told the Times Tuesday, his department monitored arrivals at Victoria International airport from Dec. 20 to Jan. 20 after learning of the operation.

During that time 25 people, mostly young married men, all from the Punjab, were identified as participants in the international immigrant smuggling scheme.

Twelve of their number have since been deported, Cook said. Some cases are pending, while others — who have blood relatives living in Canada — have been permitted to remain for a three-month visit but only after posting cash bonds of between $300 and $1,500 guaranteeing their departure.

Cook said the 25 arrived in Victoria at various times throughout the month by plane from Seattle — the final leg of a flight which originated in New Delhi and stopped over in London, England and Seattle.

When they landed they said they were en route to visit relatives in Toronto.

However, immigration officials believed that was just a ruse to gain entry into the country. (Through Commonwealth ties no visa is required for an Indian visiting Canada but the visitor must have a return ticket out of the country and limit his stay to three months.)

Cook said the object was work, generally available in west coast or interior B.C. sawmills.

He said a travel agency in Vancouver operated by an Indian whom he declined to name, is believed responsible for setting up the scheme, but no charges have been laid.

The agent, said Cook, charged each of the illegal immigrants a fee which ranged upwards from three times the cost of the $1,200 return air fare.

"A figure of $10,000 is an often bruited sum, but frankly we don't know for sure," he said.

Officials feel the persons would have been indentured for life . . . unless they were able to scrape together enough money to buy a passage back home.

"It is a form of slave trade operating right under our noses," Cook said. "It is nothing new to Canada . . . it's been done by the Chinese, the Portuguese, the Greek and Italians, too."

Cook said the Indian organizers had used Victoria as a "test area" and must have known of the staff limitations at the airport where normally only one immigration officer is on duty each shift.

He said the arrivals were purposefully set to coincide with the influx of travellers over the busy holiday period with the expectation the immigration screening would not be so punctilious.

Those engaged in the scheme were "victims of the system" possessed by the bright hope of vast wealth by Indian standards, Cook suggested.

A typical case, said Cook, was that of a young man in his mid-20's who left behind a wife and three children on the family farm in the Punjab. He told the immigration official he had come here for a visit because he had "heard about the beauties of Canada" and wanted to see them for himself.

Suspicions were aroused when it was calculated the man's air fare was equivalent to his total earnings over the past 10 years.

Cook said many of the Indians claimed they were going to visit a brother in Toronto.

"When we checked the information we discovered the brother they were talking about was a village or cousin "brother," and not any kind of brother we had ever known of."

Cook said the illicit scheme is still under investigation but that this much is known or believed to have happened:

—That an agent left from Canada and arrived in Dehli where he placed an advertizement in the local papers asking innocently "Are you interested in visiting Canada? I will help you get there."

—That the candidates were referred to an Indian travel agency. Immigration officials have traced 15 reservations to the same agency in old Delhi.

—That tickets for Pan American flights out of Delhi were arranged for the candidates.

—and that, because money cannot be take out of India legally, cash deposits were set up for the participants to pick up in either London or Seattle.

Cook said the cost to each individual varied "with whatever the market would stand."

He said though the candidate was ostensibly issued a return air ticket in compliance with Canadian visitor requirements there was some suspicion among officials here

'UFOs' JAYCEE TARGET

Unsightly Flag Offenders beware — the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce is after you.

The Jaycees have initiated a new project intended to track down all businesses whose Canadian or B.C. flag is in a tattered or torn condition.

If a Jaycee spots an unsightly flag offender (UFO), a letter will be sent asking the flag be replaced to give visiting tourists a better image of the city.

A flag may be considered unsightly, according to the Jaycees, if it is (1) tattered (2) torn (3) faded (4) not flown in centre of group, or (5) other.

CIA 'Active In Alta.'

CALGARY (CP) — Bruce McGuinness, a Vancouver television producer, said Tuesday the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) is active in Alberta "gathering information about, and perhaps trying to influence, the petroleum industry."

McGuinness, an independent producer, told radio station CFAC three persons were recruited in Alberta for CIA work by Virginio Gonzalez and "a Mr. Abbott." McGuinness formerly worked for the Calgary station.

McGuinness said earlier he was asked by Gonzalez and Abbott to watch the activities in Canada of John Meier, a former aide to recluse billionaire Howard Hughes, but he declined. He later learned from a reporter in New York that the two men were agents for the CIA.

McGuinness is a former scientific adviser to Hughes. He did not elaborate in the interview with CFAC about the CIA's alleged activities in Alberta.

A spokesman for Helen Hunley, Alberta solicitor-general, declined comment on McGuinness' statements.

Meanwhile, Harvie Andre, MP for Calgary Centre, said he wants some response from the federal government concerning McGuinness' claims.

He said it's possible the RCMP is aware of any CIA activities "but if their explanation is not sufficient, a full-fledged inquiry might well be in order."

THREATENED HOUSES teeter on the edge of a mile-wide landslide at Asbestos, Que., site of the world's largest open-pit asbestos mine. Police evacuated 45 families after the crack slithered up to the rim of the crater.

GUN PLEA FROM A-G

Attorney-General Alex. Macdonald has issued an appeal to merchants to tighten up security on the sale of guns.

B.C. has no plans to introduce legislation concerning the sale of firearms, MacDonald said in an interview today, but he added he hoped gun merchants would live up to the "necessities of modern society".

"I would hope that stores that sell rifles and shotguns and even hand guns would themselves tighten up security . . . lock up their stock overnight . . . and be more careful than they have been because of the sad situations in Vancouver and Calgary," he said.

The minister said, however, federal laws should be strengthened to require registration of either all weapons or all persons who own guns.

Guns are sold across the counter in stores like any other merchandise, he said, and this shouldn't be allowed.

Stores should ensure ammunition and guns are not easily stolen and should make sure weapons do not fall into the hands of minors, said Macdonald.

Macdonald said he believes all types of guns should be registered under federal law because statistics garnered from coroners' reports on the lower mainland show a majority of recent shooting murders have been done with shotguns rather than pistols or hand guns.

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance benefit payments for the first 11 months of 1974 were five per cent higher than for the same period in 1973, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday. The total to the end of November was $1.955 billion, up from $1.863 billion for the corresponding period in 1973.

Swiss Apply Penalty

LONDON (AP) — Swiss authorities announced today a penalty charge of 40 per cent on all funds newly deposited from abroad by non-residents after the United States dollar hit a record low against the Swiss franc in currency trading. The "negative interest" boost to 40 per cent from 12 annually was Switzerland's most radical move yet to halt the rush on the franc.

Major Spill Reported

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) — A major oil spill was reported today along the south coast of the tourist island of St. Croix, in the Virgin Islands, and the U.S. Coast Guard expressed fears of serious environmental damages.

Fire Kills 51

MANILA (AP) — A fire swept a five-storey building in a Manila suburb today, killing at least 51 persons and seriously injuring at least 79, authorities said. It was the worst fire in Philippine history.

A strike by 280 city outside workers within the next few days appeared inevitable following a breakdown of mediation efforts this morning.

Greater Victoria municipalities and the school board have stated they will respond to any single strike action with a general lockout of all 1,736 employees.

Mediation officer Clark Gilmour said he will submit his report on the dispute to Labor Minister Bill King today.

Local 50 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing city outside workers, has already posted strike notice but cannot legally act until informed by King that Gilmour's report has been received.

A general lockout is not possible either until Gilmour has submitted reports on the other contract disputes.

Gilmour said that he is submitting his report only on the Local 50 dispute today. Asked if he is is submitting reports on the other CUPE contract disputes in Greater Victoria, he said the Local 50 report is "the only one today."

Municipal negotiator E. E. Pearlman said the city is not prepared to move in the direction of the Port Alberni settlement with CUPE and will hold to its 15.76 per cent wage increase offer for 1975.

Base rate for city outside workers is $4.42 per hour but to match Port Alberni, this would have to increase to $5.40 per hour by July 1 and in addition provide for cost of living increases. Port Alberni workers' latest increase was from $4.49 an hour.

CUPE staff representative Tom Smith said the unioh expects to hear from King Thursday or Friday that Gilmour's report has been received.

He said the decision has not been made as to where the union will strike.

STANLEY PARK DRUG SLAYING

VANCOUVER (CP)—A drug dealer known to police in the Yukon and British Columbia was stalked through the dark underbrush of Stanley Park Tuesday night by a gunman who shot him repeatedly as he tried to escape.

The 23-year-old victim, bleeding heavily from three wounds, reached the safety of a roadway in the park about 8:30 p.m. and flagged down a passing motorist.

His attacker gave up the hunt. However, the victim, whose name has not been released, died before an ambulance arrived and became the city's first murder victim for 1975.

The victim reportedly told the motorist he had been shot at five times.

Homicide detectives said today the man had a record for soft drugs in Whitehorse and Vancouver. However, his body indicated that when he died he was a heroin addict.

Police working with flashlights through the night found tire marks, footprints and a trail of blood that criss-crossed a wide area of the park.

Detectives said they believe that the victim had run and possibly tried to hide behind trees while trying to escape from his assailant.

Gunman Frees 3 Hostages

Times News Services

LONDON, Ont. — Police today handed over $10,000 and a pledge of safe escape to a gunman after he released three of four children he had held hostage for nearly 24 hours in a farmhouse at nearby Thamesford.

The three children were released shaken but unharmed at about 1:30 p.m. local time.

They were taken from the farmhouse by their father, George Field, 33, who had pleaded for their release with the gunman, a family friend named Donald Wayne Cline.

Within 30 minutes, police gave in to the gunman's demands for the money and a getaway car driven by an ex-convict friend.

"We are more interested in saving that kid's (remaining hostage) life, than in making any arrest," Ontario Provincial Police assistant commissioner J. L. Erskine said.

It was not immediately known whether the gunman had agreed to release his lone hostage, Robert Field, 12, before fleeing the scene.

Police earlier had said they would not meet the gunman's demands unless he released the hostages, held since about 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Det.-Insp. Dennis Alsop of the Ontario provincial police had earlier said the gunman might pose an even greater danger if allowed to leave the house with the hostages.

Insp. Alsop then said the four children — Donald, 11, Robert, 12, Kim, 7, and David, 4 — were all well and that police were checking them by phone periodically.

The gunman said in several telephone interviews during the night he had no intention of harming the children. He said repeatedly, "the only ones who can harm these children are the police."

Cline's mother who lives in another nearby community, New Sarum, said today that her son phoned her last night to say goodbye.

Mrs. Aaron Cline said she knew nothing about the incident until a woman phoned Tuesday night and said Wayne wanted to speak to her.

She told her son to give himself up.

"He said to me 'Mom, I've always wanted to die young,'" she said.

"I told Waynie . . . don't you hurt those children," Mrs. Cline said, "He said, 'Well, maybe they'll (the police) know how I'm hurt.'"

She said Wayne had known the children since they were babies and one of them, Donald Wayne, is named after him.

"Waynie went to live with George (the children's father) when he was only seven or eight years old," she said.

Cline also told Windsor, Ont., radio station CKLW today by phone that he believed his chances for survival were "not too good."

Asked if he planned to surrender, Cline said "never."

Gov't Applies News Muzzle on Knight Firing

Members of the education department's research and development staff have been told to keep quiet on the firing of the division's director Dr. Stanley Knight.

Seven members of the new division marched angrily into the office of education deputy Jack Fleming Tuesday and said they would voice their full support for Knight, who was dismissed last week.

They emerged nearly four hours later, however, saying they could not discuss any details of the meeting for fear of losing their jobs.

"We have been warned by . . . Fleming that we cannot disclose to the public of B.C. any matter concerning our meeting today, including the matter of support for the director Dr. Stanley Knight," said group spokesman Jean Burgess.

"If I disclose any such matters our jobs may be terminated under the terms of the oath of office."

Some of the division members are public servants who are still in their probationary period but others, hired as consultants, are not under the Public Service Commission.

Burgess said Fleming also warned them that the consultants, not bound by the oath of office, could also lose their jobs if they comment "on any aspect of this meeting."

Fleming would not divulge to the staff members or to the press the reasons behind Knight's dismissal.

The deputy has said from the start Knight's dismissal was a public service matter and since grievance procedures have been launched it would not be proper to discuss the reasons behind the action.

Dismissal came at the end of Knight's six-month probationary period which ends with a recommendation by the deputy for either dismissal or permanent appointment.

Knight was hired in July to set up the research and development division which was assigned to study the department's White Paper on educational change in B.C.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly has said the matter is purely one of personnel but the members of the division said Tuesday they still hope to meet with the minister to discuss the future of the group.

Fleming described the long meeting with staff members as involving a discussion of the future of the division.

An existing superintendent of the department will supervise the staff for the moment, he said, but a replacement for Knight will not be sought while his grievance is still pending.

Work will go on as usual with the group, he said, and Burgess confirmed that the members "want their jobs."

Knight has also asked Premier Barrett to intervene in the case but Barrett has said he has no intention of doing so.
